Snow caps off holiday weekend

The second snow storm in three days blanketed the Northwest suburbs with an estimated four inches of the fluffy white stuff Sunday, creating hazardous conditions for thousands of travelers returning home from holiday outings.

But state, county and local road crews worked into the evening to clear snow and ice from major highways and streets, leading weather officials to predict clear driving for the Monday morning rush hour.

A spokesman for the Illinois State Police said the number of traffic accidents Sunday was "about three times what it normally is for the weekend."

SNOW REMOVAL in Arlington Heights was hampered this weekend when a shipment of salt failed to arrive Friday, leaving the village with no salt to spread on municipal streets.

John Schoenbeck, a foreman for the Arlington Heights Public Works Dept., said Sunday the salt should arrive today. During the weekend, crews relied on their fleet of 21 snowplows to keep the streets clear of snow, Schoenbeck said.

Because of the slick road conditions throughout the area, motorists were forced to drive their cars at less than 30 miles per hour on most streets. The snow tapered off Sunday night into mild snow flurries as 10 to 15 m.p.h. winds whipped up some small snow drifts.

OUTBOUND FLIGHTS at O'Hare Airport were generally delayed for 30 minutes, while passengers on incoming flights suffered through waits of up to an hour and more before landing. Auto traffic was backed up at least two miles on the approach ramp to O'Hare. The snow also hit hard Downstate, authorities said.

State police in Springfield reported several hundred cars stalled on interstate highways and roads where snow and sleet melted and froze again.

"We have numerous reports of vehicles stalled on roadways, and have an unconfirmed report of traffic backed up on I-55 from Elkhart to possibly Lincoln — about 12 miles," said Trooper Keith Mahan.

"Most all roads in Illinois are snowpacked and hazardous. We have more than we can take care of," he said.

The snow was expected to stop by this morning as temperatures climb into the mid to upper 20s for a high under partly sunny skies. No additional snow is expected. Winds should be

How to spend funds topic of hearings

Recommendations for how Arlington Heights should spend U.S. community development funds in 1978 are expected today from the village administration at the second of two public hearings required by federal regulations.

The meeting at 8 p.m. at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd., is expected to draw residents who annually have opposed the village board's decision to apply for the federal money.

Added to their ammunition this year are rule changes proposed by the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development that would require that the money be spent to directly benefit low-income persons.

Douglas Cannon, who made the community development funds the main issue last spring in his unsuccessful race against Village Pres. James T. Ryan, said he plans to attend the meeting with other supporters of the Village Independent Coalition Party he headed in April.

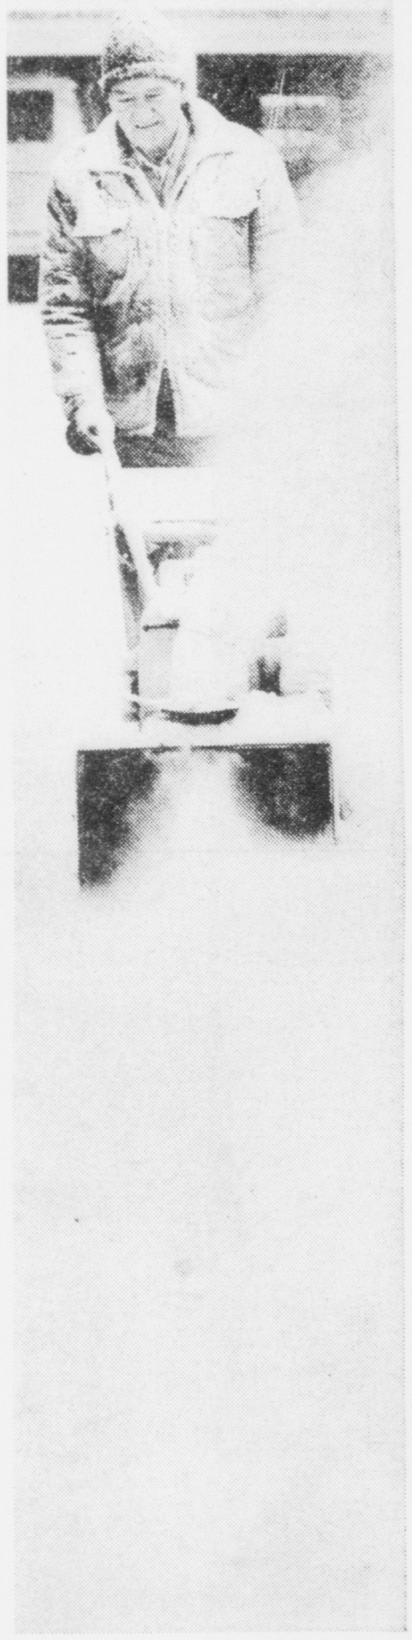

VIC CANDIDATES insisted throughout the campaign that Arlington Heights should not apply for the community development grants because of the possibility that regulations for the program would be changed.

In the past two years, the village has received a total of $453,000 through the community development program. Arlington Heights this year is eligible to apply for $451,000, but village officials fear that proposed rule changes will ruin the village's chances of receiving the money.

Regulations proposed by HUD officials would require that 75 per cent of the federal money be used to benefit blighted or deteriorating neighbor-

SNOW IS JOY for the Strobel family of Des Plaines as David, Danielle, and John with their dog Taffy Apple sail down a hill Sunday in South Park, Des Plaines. But the white stuff is little more than work to Glenn Kamrath, above, as he cleans his driveway at 600 E. Euclid Ave., Arlington Heights. Egypt planning talks in Cairo; Arabs to Tripoli

Egypt pressed forward Sunday with President Anwar Sadat's latest peace proposal despite Syrian and Palestinian opposition, inviting all nations of the Middle East, the United States and the Soviet Union to Cairo to prepare for talks in Geneva.

In Jerusalem, Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin said Israel would join the Cairo talks but never deal directly with the Palestine Liberation Organization, "even on the moon."

Officials in Syria said President Hafez Assad would shun the Cairo meeting next weekend in favor of a trip to Libya for "a crucially important summit" of hard-line Arabs. PLO leaders also scorned Sadat's invitation.

ASSAD AND OTHER hard-line Arabs, who may convene in Tripoli at the same time Sadat's group meets in Cairo, are anxious to block what they see as Egypt's attempt to reach a separate peace with Israel.

Sadat said he would go ahead with his Cairo meeting "in order to finish what we started" in Jerusalem, even if no one other than Israel attends.

Moderate Kuwait said the possibility of simultaneous summits in Egypt and Libya dramatized a "far-reaching deterioration" in Arab relations.

JORDAN, WHICH has taken a moderate position during recent Middle East developments, indicated it would reject Sadat's invitation. Amman's semi-official press predicted the proposed parley will be a repeat of last weekend's face-to-face talks between Sadat and Israeli leaders.

Libya, Algeria, South Yemen and radical Palestinian groups have endorsed the Tripoli meeting, which could begin as early as Thursday. But it was not yet clear whether Iraq, a key to any wide anti-Sadat alliance, would be ready to bury its bitter rivalry with neighboring Syria and attend.

The Egyptian president told American television interviewers Sunday he would continue his go-it-alone policy despite Arab opposition.

Revision seen as identity answer

Harper master plan under way

by RENA WISH COHEN

In the next few months, Harper College will embark on a project that will determine everything from the fate of a proposed second campus to the future contents of the college's course catalog.

The project involves an overhaul of Harper's 1966 master plan. And when it is complete, perhaps a year from now, it shold lay to rest the identity crisis that has troubled the community college for months.

The confusion has been rooted in uncertainty over what lies ahead for the 10-year-old institution: A second campus? Greater or lesser emphasis on continuing education or vocational programs? A marketing plan to keep enrollment climbing, or a narrower definition of the services Harper should provide?

MUCH OF the debate over those questions came from persons at odds with former College Pres. Robert E. Lahti and his philosophy that seemingly placed no limits on Harper's growth.

But even Lahti's critics agreed with his plea that the college's master plan needed revision.

The original $54,700 study for Harper was done by Arthur D. Little, Inc., in 1966 and expected to last 10 years. During that decade, the population boom in the Northwest suburbs boosted Harper's enrollment afr beyond the firm's projections, and a trend toward "lifelong learning," altered the face of Harper's student body, outdating the Little study even before the 10 years was past.

Now the college's board of trustees is preparing to replace the obsolete master plan with a new one. Several steps are involved:

- A consulting firm will be hired to make population projections, forecast college enrollments and help determine the college's educational direction. Six master plan proposals, ranging in cost from $38,667 to $114,330, are in the college's hands, and the board is expected to choose one by January.
- The firm will work with a team of three college administrators and one faculty member in developing the master plan. The faculty member will be released from all teaching duties for at least 18 months and also will become a key figure in preparing Harper for reaccreditation, which the college faces in the 1979-80 school year, according to Acting College Pres. John R. Birkholz.
- The central master-planning team will receive input from a committee of community representatives, faculty, administrators, support staff and board members that might number as many as 15.

BOARD MEMBERS are particularly enthusiastic about this effort to solicit the opinions of all Harper constituents — first, because it is a step toward the participatory decision-making that California consultant Max Tadlock said was sorely needed at the

'Angry' man kills one, wounds 25

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — An unemployed man accused of killing one man and wounding 25 other persons when he fired a shotgun six times into a stunned crowd of more than 200 in a supper club said simply he was angry, police said Sunday.

Ulysses L. Cribbs, 32, was arrested without resistance about five hours after the Saturday night shooting in which an off-duty sheriff's captain was killed.

Cribbs was caught at his North Omaha home after all available metropolitan area law officers were pressed into search and he was booked on suspicion of first-degree murder and three counts of shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim.

"He just said he was angry — that's all he said," said police Lt. Foster Burchard after talking with Cribbs Sunday. "He didn't run out of the place, he walked out."

Burchard said Cribbs told detectives he was a Vietnam veteran, unemployed and on a pension of some sort.

FOLLOWING THE incident at the Club 89 in West Omaha, Burchard said Cribbs allegedly told "two people to call the police — that he had just shot some people."

Capt. Dennis Lipari, 39, father of six, was fatally wounded by a shotgun blast to the head, while is wife, Ruth, was critically wounded in both eyes. They were among a group that included two other off-duty sheriff's deputies seated at a table awaiting the start of a puppet show by radio disc jockey Dave Wingert.

"We heard an explosion out in the front lobby. It sounded like a chandelier faling or a bottle of champagne popping," said Kenneth Joos of Omaha, whose wife and two daughters-in-law were wounded. "Then this fellow came running down from the front door to the stage. He was holldering 'No, No, No.' The suspect was apparently chasing him."

The suspect entered the restaurant lobby, fired one blast at a man standing by the door, another at Dorene Grey, 16, the Club 89's coat check girl, and then went to a landing where he fired four more shots into the crowd, police said.

SOME OF THE Club 89 patrons first thought the incident was part of Wingert's show.

"We thought it was part of the stage act," Joos said. "Then someone on the stage hollered, 'Get down, get down,' and everybody dove under the table."

Wingert, who suffered a superficial pellet wound, said he heard a bang that sounded like a firecracker. He said he saw a man staggering down the aisle.

"I heard another shot and saw a flash and felt a pain in my shoulder," Wingert said. "God or somebody was looking after me. They said it was buckshot and it bounced off me. After I felt that, I hit the floor."

Sobbing fans pay visit to Elvis Presley's grave

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Hundreds of wet, chilly fans, some sobbing softly and others carrying flowers, filed slowly Sunday past a simple grave where Elvis Presley is buried in a garden on the grounds of his Graceland mansion.

Temperatures were in the 30s and a steady rain fell as the Graceland gates were opened to the public for the first time since the bodies of Presley and his mother were moved from the mausoleum in a nearby cemetery where they originally were entombed.

Because of the weather conditions, the crowd of thousands that had been expected never materialized. There were, however, about 300 persons huddling under blankets and umbrellas in line when the tours began at 8:45 a.m. The number of persons in line remained steady throughout the day.

ABOUT 25 fans had waited outside the mansion in near-freezing temperatures all night before being led by Presley's former bodyguards to his grave.

Few words were spoken as they filed slowly up the winding driveway of Graceland to a small terraced garden area several hundred feet from the mansion where Presley lived until his death Aug. 16.

The visitors moved quietly about the grave, some openly weeping. Severeal carried a single rose that they left behind.

Most snapped pictures of the grave and the wilting flowers lying in the rain.

DIANE ARDOIN, a 28-year-old woman from Port Arthur, Tex., was one of the fans who spent the night in the cold and rain and she was the first to see the grave.

"I got an awfully big lump in my throat," she said. "What they said is true — he'll never be forgotten. He's still here. He's gone, but he'll never be forgotten."

Carrying a blanket and wearing three shirts, two pairs of slacks and two coats, Mrs. Ardoin said she had waited 22 hours to be the first in line.

Following close behind was Hugh Jones, director of the housing authority in Morrilton, Ark. Admitting that he never had done anything like it before, Jones said he considered the wait worthwhile.

"It was tough. It was really rough overnight. But we were here to stay," he said. "I think Vernon Presley (father of Elvis) has done an excellent job with the grave. It brings tears to your eyes — and it did to mine."

Each group was given about five minutes to walk around the semicircular garden before being escorted back down the driveway.

Dick Grob, chief of security for the Presley family, said the tours would continue as long as fans cooperated.

"If we start getting some destruction of property, then they will be ceased," he said. The estate will be closed Monday but tours will resume Tuesday on a regular Tuesday-through-Sunday schedule with 20-minute tours from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., he said.

Portuguese rule on brink of collapse

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — A breakdown in compromise talks with the opposition Sunday pushed Prime Minister Mario Soares' Socialist government to the brink of collapse after 16 months of minority rule.

Politicians said Soares was now almost irrevocably committed to asking for a vote of confidence in the legislative assembly by Friday and that his party had little likelihood of winning the ballots.

"Soares is like a man who played a game of Russian roulette in jest only to discover a bullet in the barrel and everyone urging him to pull the trigger," one said.

THE PRIME minister's dilemma grew out of his demand in mid-November that the three big opposition parties give his party their unqualified support in the assembly without having any say in the formulation and implementaton of government policy.

The Communists agreed to this position, but the other two big parties — the centrist Social Democrats and conservative Center Democrats — said no.

The two parties to the right of the Socialists both said the platform Soares offered would force them to share the blame for unpopular Socialist legislation without sharing any of the responsibility for devising it.

In negotiations with these parties last week, Soares refused to make any compromises, sticking to his position that either his party governed alone or it went into opposition.

IF THE GOVERNMENT collapsed as politicians were predicting, President Antonio Ramalho Eanes would be required to intervene under the terms of Portugal's constitution.

Under this document, he has the right to ask Soares or someone else to form a new government within 10 days, which the assembly would have to approve. If this effort failed, the assembly would be dissolved and new general elections called.

The motivating force behind Portugal's latest crisis has been its worsening economic woes and harsh conditions laid down by the International Monetary Fund as tht price for necessary new loans.

Central to the IMF conditions has beena reduction in government spending and measures to reduce the nation's current $1.2 billion balance of payments deficit.

WITH INFLATION running at more than 30 per cent and unemployment at 15 per cent, the Socialists have been reluctant to accept these conditions without having the full weight of the assembly behind them.

Politicians said the negative response to Soares' proposal by the two parties to the right has now made this virtually impossible.

Despite this opposition, the Socialists, who control 100 of the 262 assembly seats, could still win a majority with the Communists' 40 votes. Soares, however, has said he would not be willing to continue governing with only support from this sector.

Black Gold gets 2nd again but it's no cat-tastrophe

by LINDA PUNCH

Frank DiJoseph watches intently as the judge hoists his Siamese kitten "Navarone's Black Gold" into the air and scrutinizes it from head to foot.

He comments on the merits of another feline in the competition that consistently has beaten his six-month-old seal-point for first place honors. Moments later, the judge makes her decision. Black Gold once again is in second place.

"He's just not like his father. His father always got first place," DiJoseph said.

DIJOSEPH WAS among the 340 exhibitors attending this weekend's Windy City Fanciers' Ninth Annual All Breed Cat show at the Ramada Inn O'Hare, Rosemont. The Schaumburg cat breeder, like the other competitors, has primped and groomed his pet with one hope — that the judge will declare him a champion.

DiJoseph admits that Black Gold, known commonly as "Ding-a-Ling," does not have the star quality of his father, Navarone's Sequoia. Sequoia, retired, is former grand champion and best siamese for the Midwest region. DiJoseph points to a small break in Black Gold's nose, a flow that has cost the kitten points in judging.

"They don't want a break in the nose. That's why he's not doing as well as the others. If I had his father here, you would see a cat," he said.

Competition is in process continually in four areas. Numbers and breeds are announced over the loud speakers and competitors come from all over the convention hall to deposit their cats in cages in the judging areas. The owners watch silently from two rows of chairs as the judge lifts and examines each cat before handing out the ribbons.

IN THE SHORT-HAIRED kitten class, one silver and grey tabby watches curiously as an opponent is dangled in the air by a woman judge. In a neighboring cage, an Abyssinian kitten somersaults as he attempts to find a way out. He utters a meow in protest before settling down and watching the action.

DiJoseph said most kittens are nervous at shows because they're "in strange surroundings and some have never been in a cage before.

"They're nervous and on the defensive because they don't know what's going on," he said. "After three or four times, they're more relaxed."

In another class, the judge dangles a peacock feather in front of several cages to observe each cat's movement, then makes her decision. After handing out ribbons, she directs comments to the spectators.

"I think it's time for No. 92 to take some weight off. He's very, very nice but he can't carry that weight," she said.

Between classes, the cats lounge or play in their cages. Some sit back and watch the streams of spectators walk by while others catch quick . . . er, cat nap. In one cage, a tabby washes off her kitten, recently returned from competition.

AS THE CATS are called for classes, the owners make last minute touch ups to improve their appearances. One woman vigorously brushes the tail of her gray Persian before hustling him off to be judged. DiJoseph runs a rubber comb over his kitten and checks his eyes and ears for cleanliness.

"I wipe him down with a chamois cloth. It takes out the static in his fur," he said.

DiJoseph annually travels all over the country to exhibit his cats, which numbered 18 at one time. And while Black Gold probably never will be a champion, he still hopes to find another champion like Sequoia.

"Only 2 per cent make the top," he said. "I know breeders who have been in the business 15 or 20 years and never had a champion," he said.

Typical home buyer image changing: poll

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The typical American home buyer this year was between 25-and 30-years-old, earned about $15,500, as a professional or skilled laborer, lived in the suburbs and was married but had no children.

That picture emerged from a study done by Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., a Boston firm, that works with lenders insuring mortgage loans.

"The very fact that these buyers are so representative of the population as a whole may be a surprise in some quarters," said Jackson W. Goss, IMIC president. "Many of the gloomier reports have been telling us that buying a home today is a hopeless dream for the average American."

GOSS SAID his firm's study points up major change in the housing market during the past 10 years.

They include:

• Multi-earner families ,those with more than one breadwinner, now comprise half of all home buyers. Ten years ago, only 25 per cent of the home buying families had more than one working outside the home.

• Unmarried buyers now number close to 20 per cent of the total. Ten years ago, single buyers were virtually unknown in the housing market.

• Fully 60 per cent of the current purchasers have no children, a swing away from the time when families waited until they had at least one child before buying a home. In 1967, only 35 per cent of home buyers were childless.

• Homes have more floor space, up about 15 per cent to an average of 1,720 square feet but lots are smaller as cluster housing becomes more prevalent.

• Air conditioning, dishwashers, fireplaces and extra baths are included in a majority of homes now sold. In 1967, such amenities were unavailable in most homes.

• The traditional single family detached dwelling still is the most popular, representing about 71 per cent of all purchases. But in 1967, before condominiums and townhouses became popular, the detached home made up 95 per cent of all sales.

"Larger homes for smaller families, younger buyers for older homes — it may not seem to make much sense, but it's all adding up to a record year for housing sales," Goss said.

Saccharin warning label slated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Packages of saccharin and all foods containing the artificial sweetner will begin carrying labels next Feb. 23 warning the product could cause cancer, the Food and Drug Administration said Sunday.

The warning will state:

"Use of this product may be hazardous to your health. This product contains saccharin which has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals."

The labeling is required 90 days from the date President Carter signed the Saccharin Study and Labeling Act. He did so Nov. 23.

In addition to the labeling regulation, the act forbids the FDA from removing saccharin from the market for 18 months.

"All the available evidence demonstrates that saccharin can cause cancer in test animals and does so; and we have every reason to believe that it also causes cancer in people," said FDA Assistant Cmsr. John Walden.

The FDA will hold a public hearing on the order Dec. 2.

NYLON ASCOTS, replacing conventional neck ties in the Mount Prospect Police Dept., could be a new trend in police fashions. Chief Ralph J. Doney, center, says several neighboring communities have inquired about the new look in police wear. The scarves will be worn through the winter months. The utility cap, modeled by patrol officer Andy Toth, left, is the pol cedepartment's new summer head gear. Viaison Officer Tom Daley, right, says the scarves are more comfortable than the traditiona four-in-hand ties.

South Side tavern fire kills four

CHICAGO (UPI) — At least four persons were killed in a fire early Sunday that raced through a South Side tavern and into apartments on the second floor of the two-story building, firefighters said.

Several of the victims, whose names were not immediately released, were burned beyond recognition.

The fire broke out in the Blue Point Lounge about closing time Sunday, said Joe Smith, 34, owner of an adjacent restaurant, who reported the blaze at about 4 a.m.

Smith said the lights began to blink in his Seven Sons Carry Out Restaurant next door to the lounge, and he opened the door to investigate when he smelled smoke.

"FLAMES WERE blazing out the back of the building and had melted the wires to my building," he said. "I ran back through the store and out my front door."

Once outside, Smith said he saw smoke billowing from the second floor windows and flames glowing inside the first floor plate glass window of the lounge.

Second Division Fire Marshal Ennis Rice said three of the victims were found in the bar, and one on the back stairway.

Several persons in the building managed to escape by the time firefighters arrived, Rice said.

Firefighters brought the blaze under control at about 5 a.m., Rice said. The cause of the fire, which inflicted extensive damage on the brick structure, was undetermined early, investigators said.

between 10 and 15 miles per hour.

ILLINOIS AND INDIANA each recorded 20 highway deaths over the Thanksgiving Holiday, which officially ended at midnight Sunday. A United Press International count Sunday night showed 438 persons had died in traffic accidents during the holiday.

The National Safety Council had estimated that between 460 and 540 persons would be killed and 20,000 to 25,000 persons could suffer disabling injuries in the holiday traffic accidents.

The preholiday estimate of holiday traffic deaths was lower than the average toll for a four-day, nonholiday weekend late in autumn because of reduced auto travel and increased use of public transportation, a council spokesman said.

UPI's count also showed 45 persons died in fires during the holiday, 16 died in airplane mishaps totalling 509 deaths during the holiday until 2 p.m. Sunday.

Chestnuts roasting in cold Loop air?

Starting Monday, the smell of roasting chestnuts will add to the holiday atmosphere at the heart of the loop shopping area. Di Yip Loo, a native of China, will roast the nuts by hand from an old-fashioned rolling cart at the corner of State and Adams streets. He learned the technique in China. A spokesman for the State Street Council said Loo, wearing a pigtail and a red quilted coat decked with holly, will produce two pounds of nuts every five minutes, selling for 25 cents per cup. He also will perform magic tricks in his spare time. The council said it would like to give the nuts away but can't afford to. "We'd go nuts if we did," the spokesman said. Instead, they'll sell for 25 cents per cup. The rolling cart will be the only outdoor chestnut roasting stand in Chicago this year, the council said.

Cop-civilian death ratio 1-5: poll

Chicago police shot and killed 5.3 civilians for every one policeman killed. The Chicago Law Enforcement Study Group reported. A civilian is killed by a Chicago policeman on an average of once every 11.9 days and is wounded by police gunfire every three days. The study, which is still in progress, will attempt to determine whether Chicago police are more prone to using their guns than police in other cities, a spokeswoman said. A policeman is killed by a civilian once every 64.1 days and a policeman is wounded

Smoke detector lawsuits expected

Between 50 and 100 owners of the city's biggest apartment buildings will be confronted with lawsuits next month dealing with smoke detector violations, top City Hall officials said. The lawsuits, being quietly put together by a team of city building inspectors, are expected to be filed a few day before Christmas, officials said. The smoke detector requirement for all buildings with six or more dwellings without cement walls and stairwells was passed through the City Council last spring, but many landlords have ignored them. Building Comr. Joseph Fitzgerald said his inspectors have found compliance across the city no higher than 14 per cent. "A lot of people just don't think we're serious," he said.

Money is tight: Marilyn Henely

The former wife of Airline Canteen Service Inc. owner Walter J. Henely says she is in serious financial trouble despite the award of about $2 million in the property settlement of a divorce action. Marilyn (Kandy) Henely charged Saturday that the divorce settlement awarded her last month hi dat least $90,000 in mortgaged property and unpaid bills for which she might be liable. Henely's Airline Canteen Inc. had been the newspaper and notions concessionaire at O'Hare International Airport until recently. Mayor Michael A. Bilandic terminated the firm's contract, and an investigation is being conducted to determine if the firm failed to disclose all of its receipts to the city. Airline was under contract to give the city 12 per cent of its gross revenues.

Elk Grove against abortion clinic

A Daily Herald staff report

Elk Grove Village residents disapproved by a margin of almost 2-to1 a proposal to open a privately operated abortion clinic in their village, a survey by The Daily Herald Shows.

A random telephone poll of 375 village residents Nov. 21 and 22 shows 53.6 per cent disapprove of the clinic, 28 per cent approve and 18.4 per cent have no opinion.

The proposal to open the clinic has been an emotional issue for several months in Elk Grove Vllage. The survey results show a clear majority of residents object to the plan for reasons ranging from moral opposition to abortion to serious doubts about the format of the clinic.

DESPITE THE clear cut opposition to the clinic, Elk Grove Village officials now are considering changes to the village zoning laws which would allow such clinics to operate in the village.

The controversy involves plans to renovate half of the Medical-Dental Clinic at 750-76 4S. Arlington Heights Rd. as a private "ambulatory surgical treatment center" specializing in abortions. The owner of the building needs a building permit from the village so he can make the necessary changes and rent it to a Florida man who will operate the abortion clinic.

Currently abortions are performed only at three hospitals in the Northwest suburbs: Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights; Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge; and Sherman Hospital, Elgin.

So far Elk Grove Village officials have blocked the opening of the clinic mit for renovations. Officials say the by refusing to grant the building per- abortion clinic does not qualify under current zoning regulations.

The owner of the building, George M. Long, since has filed a lawsuit against the village, charging that abortion clinics are permitted under the village's zoning laws and that village officials are trying to stall his plans.

MOST VILLAGE officials publicly say the issue is strictly over zoning, but some admit they are opposed to it for "social" and "safety" reasons.

Although more than half of those surveyed said they oppose the clinic, the village now may be paving the way for its opening. The village plan commission is studying amendments to the zoning laws which would permit abortion clinics. Many view the amendments as a way out of the village's current legal battle with Long.

Of those who disapprove of the clinic, 51.2 per cent cited their opposition to abortion in general as the reason.

However, 41.3 per cent said they object to the proposed clinic because they believe abortions should be performed in hospitals. Many of these respondents said they believe abortion is a matter of personal choice.

About 23 per cent of those who disapprove of the clinic said they simply don't want it in Elk Grove Village, while 9.5 per cent said it would "attract the wrong kind of people."

THE TOTALS add up to more than 100 per cent because respondents were permitted to cite more than one reason for objecting to the clinic.

A sampling of comments by Elk Grove Village residents about the abortion clinic mirrors the findings of the survey.

One woman, who described herself as a housewife, said she is not opposed to abortion in general.

"I don't want it (the clinic) in my neighborhood, but I wouldn't mind if it was in Chicago," she said. "If it was part of a hospital, that would be different."

Mary Rooney, 1041 Grissom Tr., said, "I'm against abortion and I would rather not have it in my community. I think it would bring it down a bit. It's a nice family community."

JIM MURRAY, 700 Wellington Ave., agreed. "I don't believe in it (abortion). Even if I wasn't Catholic I wouldn't believe in it," he said.

One man who refused to give his name, said he doesn't think the proposed clinic is all that bad.

"If they put it next to my house, I wouldn't mind," he said. "I have a 16-year-old boy. In a couple of years, who knows?"

Village plan commission members, who are considering the zoning changes which would permit the clinic, said the survey results are confirmed by the public reaction they have received in telephone calls and letters.

Leah Cummins said many residents she has talked to are uneasy about abortions being performed anywhere but a hospital. She said people have heard bad things about abortion clinics.

"Everybody is conditioned to believe the safest place is a hospital," she said. "A lot of people say if anyone needs them (abortions) let them go to Arlington Heights."

JOHN GLASS, another plan commission member, said public opinion will influence his decision about the zoning changes.

"If there is no response at all then we're in a vacuum and we decide on the facts represented to us," he said.

George Long, the man fighting for the abortion clinic, blamed the opposi- abortion is anyway," he said. He said the procedure is suitable for an outpatient clinic, and need not be done in a hospital.

"I've had several people who have given me moral support and said, 'I hope you beat the village on this.' "

Ways to spend HUD funds hearing topic

hoods, which Arlington Heights does not have.

Village officials have filed a protest against the proposed rule changes and have urged Illinois congressmen to join them in opposing the HUD proposals.

"I'm not the least bit surprised that the rules are being changed," Cannon said. "My concern now is whether these new guidelines could be retroactive. I don't think the village can consider that question closed yet," he said.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS are confident that the proposed changes will not affect projects already approved by HUD in the village's applications the two previous years.

The village has allocated the money it has received for the acquisition of land for a downtown parking garage and the Arlington Heights Historical Society, to relocate a sewer line, install sidewalks and to finance a housing counselor.

Similar uses of community development money by most other cities eligible to receive the funds are the main reasons for the proposed rule changes, HUD officials said.

"What realistic hope do we have of getting these proposed regulations changed when the large cities will be lobbying very heavily for these changes," Cannon said.

He said that VIC supporters still believe it is wrong for Arlington Heights to apply for the community development money because of the relatively small number of low-income persons in the village.

"The goal of the (community development) act is low- and moderate-income housing and if we participate we must recognize our projects must be in line with that goal," Cannon said.

REPRESENTATIVES of the Northwest Opportunity Center, a social services agency, also are expected to speak at today's public hearing and urge village officials to not let the proposed rule changes stop them from applying for the money.

A memorandum sent to village officials last week by Michael Raimondi, director of the Northwest Opportunity Center and Jean Meier, a housing counselor, urges the village administration to take "a more positive attitude" about the proposed rule changes.

Raimondi and Meier suggest that other projects can be formulated that will meet the new regulations, including a low-interest rehabilitation loan program, code enforcement on the backstretch area of Arlington Park Race Track, access ramps for handicapped and elderly persons and activities in support of new housing construction for low-income persons.

Owens, Dion, Foglia win posts in youth association

Three residents not slated by the Arlington Heights Youth Athletic Association's nominating committee were elected during the association's annual election of officers.

Ray Owens was elected secretary, Sig Dion was elected statistician and Vince Foglia was elected major league representative after a campaign by a group called the Committee of Concerned Members for Improving AHYAA.

About 150 persons voted in last week's election, Marian Taylor, administrator for the AHYAA, said.

THE AHYAA operates baseball and football programs for Arlington Heights boys and girls.

Owens, Dion and Foglia defeated Joe Kapcheck, Marily Wegner and Bill Johnstone. Vote totals were not available.

Also elected were those residents who were slated by the association's nominating committee and ran unopposed. They are: Don Contino, president; Jim McDonald, vice president; Bob Gurley, treasurer; Ben Shor, past president.

Elected committee chairmen were: Harry McCollum and Bill Drevline, building; Fred Riedl, equipment; Ivan Dvaroacek, field development; Doug Banker, football; Joyce Rosley, girls softball; Art Hanke, manager recruitment; Roger Brinker, pancake breakfasts; Ev Huff, program book; Earl Petersen, public relations; John Knauss, team administrator; and Kurt Pingel, umpires.

Other league representatives elected are Art Busby, senior; Bob Wisbey, varsity; Tom Beveridge, intermediate; and Carl Klubon, junior.

Mild earthquake hits Oregon area

A mild, rolling earthquake struck a 3,000-square-mile area of southwest Idaho and eastern Oregon early Sunday, shaking houses, rattling dishes and frightening residents and animals, but apparently doing little or no damage. The quake, at 2:26 a.m. MST, was centerd about 70 miles north of Boise, near Cascade, and registered 4.5 on the Richter scale, a magnitude that can cause moderate damage. But no injuries were immediately reported. The temblor, which a Boise resident described as having a "slight roar," lasted about 1 to 1½ minutes, according to the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., and the U.S. Geological Survey seismograph at Newport, Wash.

Boy 'critical' after tiger mauling

A five-year-old Burbank, Calif., boy, mauled by a friend's pet tiger, was listed in critical condition in a hospital Sunday. Officials said the incident occurred while John Applewhite, 5, Canoga Park, and his family was visiting a family friend, Dee Arland, in the Tumunga area. The boy and two sisters were sleeping on a front room floor at the Arland home when the tiger wandered ito the room and began slapping the sleeping boy. Miss Arland told deputies she keeps the 5-year-old, 400-pound, defanged and declawed tiger in her bedroom at night. The Dept. of Animal Control quarantined the tiger at the home pending an investigation, deputies said.

4 dead in military plane crash

A small plane carrying four military officers — two men and two women — crashed in Kings Canyon National Park in Independence, Calif., killing all aboard, officials reported Sunday. The wreckage of the single-engine Piper Cherokee, missing since Saturday morning when it called the Air Traffic Control Center in Fresno, Calif., was spotted Sunday by one of several C-130 military planes taking part in an air and ground search. Hank Jones, information officer for the national park, said the craft — en route from Moffett Field near San Francisco to Las Vegas — apparently crashed shortly after the transmission Saturday about 20 miles southeast of Independence. He said all four bodies were found.

Carter sees better Soviet relations

President Carter says he belives relations with the Soviet Union will improve despite criticism of its human rights policies and predicts a new strategic arms limitation agreement between the two superpowers in the near future. In an interview with the weekly l'Express being published Monday, Carter held out hope for bettering U.S.-Soviet relations, for peace in the Middle East, for keeping oil prices down and for maintaining the strength of the U.S. dollar. But he was less confident about chances for peace in southern Africa, which he termed a "doubtful and complex" problem. Carter was interviewed by Pierre Salinger, former press secretary to John F. Kennedy and now a roving correspondent for l'Express. The interview was conducted last Wednesday at the White House.

Sadat to resign if peace try fails

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said in television interviews released Sunday that he is prepared to resign if his peace initiative fails. Sadat also said on the ABC "Issues and Answers" show and the CBS program "Face the Nation" that, if he had to, he would go alone to a Geneva peace conference on the Middle East and would present any results achieved to an Arab summit. Sadat said that he told Syrian President Hafez Assad of Syria two weeks ago he was prepared to resign if his peace initiative was his last mission. Sadat said that if he is proved wrong about his moves toward peace, "I have the courage to go to my assembly and say here is my resignation." Israeli U.N. Ambassador Chaim Herzog, also appearing on Issues and Answers said: "I believe everything President Sadat says" and praised the Egyptian leader for his "dramatic moves."

German locomotive explodes

A locomotive exploded as it was pulling an express train into a station in East Germany Sunday, touching off a fire in one of the passenger cars and causing more than 50 casualties, the East German news agency reported. The agency said at least six persons were killed and 45 injured, eight seriously, when the locomotive's boiler exploded just as the train was pulling into the station at Bitterfeld, near Halle, in East Germnay. The first passenger car behind the locomotive was set on fire and damage to the station as a result of the blast was considerable, the agency said. The injured were taken to nearby hospitals. The train was passing through Bitterfeld en route from East Berlin to Reichenbach in the Vogtland district in the south.

THOUGHTS on a MATTRESS

For almost five years our little mattress factory has been doing an ever increasing business by attracting the astute, intelligent customer with the experience to recognize the difference between some so-called "discount" or "sale" price and a top quality product at a low price.

And we would like to emphasize one point — this is a FACTORY — not a "Factory Outlet" or "Factory Closeout Mart" or some other rip-off of just another retail store. We actually make our mattresses and box springs right here before your very eyes.

Our mattresses and box springs are made with top quality materials and specifications that have been proven over many years. Our prices are based on the cost of the materials that go into each product that we make. And we know that when you compare quality for quality, our prices are very, very low.

I guess that is why so many customers who have shopped all the so-called "sale" priced mattresses in the area come back and buy ours.

Incidentally, our service is excellent, too.

Study confirms danger

Sleeping pill tied to 5,000 deaths

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal study estimates sleeping pills are associated with nearly 5,000 deaths a year in the United States, the director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse said Sunday.

Releasing the NIDA study, Dr. Robert DuPont also said users of barbiturates — or "sleeping pills" — make about 25,000 trips to hospital emergency wards each year, and about the same number enter drug abuse treatment annually.

"What came as a major surprise to me in the study was the realization that these drugs are not only dangerous but that they are probably not effective in terms of treating the insomnia," DuPont said.

The NIDA study of nighttime sleeping pills and daytime sedatives, or "tranquilizers," was produced on orders of President Carter, who told the agency to determine "how we can best control the abuse of barbiturates and other prescription drugs which cause many deaths, while not interfering with their legitimate medical use."

IN AN INTERVIEW, DuPont said the resultant study "confirmed our understanding that barbiturates, or sleeping pills, pose a unique and serius problem in terms of both death and . . . abuse."

He said the NIDA researchers estimated nearly 5,000 deaths occur each year that are either directly related to barbiturates or in which barbiturates were involved.

Having sleeping pills in the family medicine cabinet, he said, "is like having a loaded gun in the house."

The NIDA study said sleeping pills and tranquilizers, combined, are still the most commonly prescribed medicines in the world.

Americans alone got about 27 million sleeping pill prescriptions — an estimated 1 billion doses — in 1976.

HE SAID PRESCRIPTION sleeping pills are "often remarkably effective when taken for one or two nights."

But the NIDA study, he said, said most such pills appear to be ineffective beyond two weeks consecutive use and, after that point, can create disorders that themselves cause insomnia.

DuPont said he has asked the Food and Drug Administration to consider requiring manufacturers of these drugs either to demonstrate they are effective with repeated use or to label them accordingly.

OTHER MOVES under consideration, he said, include a prospective national education campaign, aimed at doctors and consumers, on the potential dangers and limitations of barbiturates.

"Many patients and doctors are too quick to turn to a pill to deal with the problem of temporary insomnia and frequently ignore the fact that it is a common symptom of depression and anxiety," he said.

He urged doctors to prescribe "the safest medication, and that is certainly not a barbiturate or the most commonly prescribed nonbarbiturate sleeping pills such as Doriden, Noludar, Placidyl or methaqualone.

"In fact, the safest and probably the most effective sleeping medications appear to be the benzodiazepine drugs such as Dalmane and Valium," DuPont said.

Mail packages now for timely Yule

It's time to start mailing Christmas cards and packages, especially if they're going across the Atlantic, area postmasters say.

An East Coast dockworkers' strike has halted regular mail deliveries to Europe. Packages being sent aborad must be sent air mail which is four times as expensive as the regular package rate.

"You can mail anytime from this point on. We look upon the week of Dec. 5 through 10 as the first big week for the Christmas card rush," said Daniel L. Swanson, Arlington Heights postmaster.

Swanson and other postmasters agree following these tips will help in speeding cards and packages to their destinations :

- When mailing a large number of cards, place them into local and nonlocal piles and rubber band them together before mailing. This aids the postal sorters.
- Be sure Zip Codes are on all cards and packages. Leaving it off could cost days.
- Wrap packages with heavy-duty paper and tape, but do not use twine because it can get caught in the new equipment many post offices use to process packages. Also be sure the name and address the package is being sent to appears inside the package as well as on the wrapping.
- Many Northwest suburban banks and savings and loan associations have arranged to sell Christmas postage stamps this year. Check your local bank or savings institution before going to a post office for stamps.
- If you must go to a post office, try to time your trip for a nonpeak time. Most Northwest suburban post offices report that from about 10 a.m. to noon and 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. are their slowest times.
- Mail packages by Dec. 12 if going anywhere air mail and Dec. 1 if going surface mail to Alaska and Hawaii.
- Do not send cash in the mail.
- Empty your own mail box daily so there will be room for the next day's deliveries.

"Our basic concern is that they get at it. The earlier you get it done, the more minimal the problems," Swanson said.

The week of Dec. 5 to Dec. 11 is being designated Christmas card week in an attempt to get people to mail early, said Ralph Palubicki, Mount Prospect postmaster.

"A few cards are coming through now and we expect some this weekend, but the first of December is when cards start," Palubicki said.

The Mount Prospect facility handles an average of 300,000 pieces of mail daily during the Christmas season compared to 135,000 pieces a day normally, he said.

"As we get closer to the 15th of December, we suggest people use special handling or the express mail service for their packages," said Alvin Kehe, officer in charge at the Palatine Post Office.

And as winter weather becomes more severe, Kahe suggests one other step people should take to help the postal service deliver their Christmas mail.

"Nationwide, 30,000 carriers were injured last year on icy stairs or sidewalks. People can help by cleaning their steps and sidewalks," he said.

Drugs found to curb Parkinson's

A new class of drugs is significantly successful in the treatment of Parkinson's Disease, the Journal of the American Medical Assn. reports.

Dr. Abraham Lieberman of the New York University School of Medicine said that a six-month trial with 20 patients show that the drug, called lergotrile, helped reduce rigidity, tremor and gait disturbance associated with Parkinson's Disease when used with two other drugs.

Previously, a drug known as L-Dopa, or levodopa, had been thought to relieve the symptoms of palsy and rigidity. But researchers found that after several years use, the L-Dopa was progressively less and less effective and the symptoms returned.

Dist. 214 must decide priorities

The High School Dist. 214 Board of Education will begin the politically sensitive project of sorting out its building improvement priorities tonight.

The board will meet to discuss the priorities the district's eight principals place on proposed building additions. The proposals range from a major classroom addition at Arlington High School to expansion of art and wood working classrooms in some buildings.

Earlier this fall the board wisely concurred with a citizen's committee recommendation not to have a referendum to raise funds for the improvements. Instead, the district will use its cash reserve during the next five years to make the most crucial improvements.

The board will have a difficult time sorting out the most important projects without shortchanging any part of the district. However, as they undertake the task there are several things that must take priority.

First, it is clear the district must take steps to expand physical education facilities so that federal rules on equality of boys' and girls' sports will be meaningful. Facilities at all schools are crowded because of the rules. District officials must relieve the overcrowding.

In addition, two of the district's schools, Arlington and Forest View, are clearly in need of immediate attention. Arlington, the oldest school in the district, needs renovation, although district officials must consider how reasonable it is to put substantial funds into such an old building.

Forest View, a newer building which has a number of serious problems, also needs attention. The discontent of residents of the Forest View area with their building became clear last spring during the campaign for the unit school district in Elk Grove Twp. Dist. 59.

Once those three priorities — improved physical education facilities and renovation of Arlington and Forest View high schools — are taken care of, the district will be able to consider other changes that may be needed in district schools.

Those important issues, however, must be dealt with first as the Dist. 214 board begins deliberations.

Admiring our latest hero

Several times a year, we recognize local heroes on the editorial page.

Just because we've done it before, doesn't lessen the accomplishment of the newest Northwest suburban hero, Rolling Meadows Patrolman Richard Hammer.

On Nov. 17, Hammer was the first to arrive at the scene of an early morning fire in the Meadow Edge subdivision. He rescued three members of the McWeeney family as their home went up in flames, then drove to Northwest Community Hospital and collapsed of smoke inhalation.

Before he collapsed, he rescued Hildegarde, Kevin and Brian McWeeney, helped stop a bleeding artery in Kevin's arm and decided, in his own words, "I'd never be a fireman."

Maybe not, but Hammer is a good cop — and a hero. He deserves admiration.

Carter acts for rabbits

Two carrots and a cabbage to President Carter for vetoing a bill requiring the government to inspect domesticated rabbits and rabbit meat.

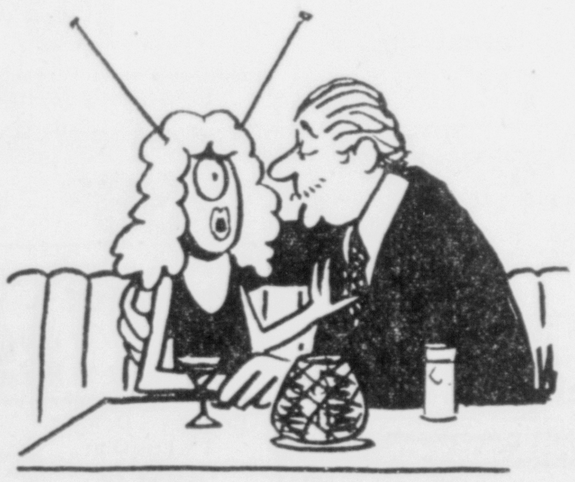

One thing we don't need in this country is a new rabbit inspection program.

We can hear it now: "Shape up, you rabbits! Tuck in those ears! Grab your mops! This hutch is a disgrace!"

Besides, we already have a voluntary inspection program paid for by people who sell rabbit meat. Why make it mandatory at the expense of the great majority of taxpayers who never eat rabbit?

Fence post

letters to the editor

Letters must be signed, and no letters will be published anonymously. Letters are subject to condensation, and a maximum length of 300 words is recommended. Direct your mail to the Fence post, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Thanks for your article entitled "Should lay hypnotists be banned?" on Nov. 16. I would like to contribute the following toward finding a reasoned answer to that important question.

The fact that Mr. Grossi, the lay hypnotherapist, is so successful financially serves to underline the importance of the old adage, "Caveat emptor" (Let the buyer beware!) Buyers of therapy should be aware that influence through hypnotic suggestions to the subconscious can indeed be great — very great. In fact, the influence can be so impressive and the symptomatic changes so extensive that only the rash would put herself or himself in the hands of an unqualified hypnotist.

Legally, of course, in Illinois anyone can call himself a certified hypnotherapist, whether qualified or not qualified to exert such influence on suggestible persons. There is no law to prevent grossly unqualified hypnotists from advertising their potentially dangerous skills in the mass media, as there is for psychologists and psychiatrists. There is no state regulatory body that introduces the discipline and control of licensing and/or certification for hypnotists. It seems clear that this should be a function of the Illinois Dept. of Registration and Education which licenses qualified private practioners of the healing arts.

In the absence of such certification or licensing, it is only prudent that the buyer of therapy or the experimenter with hypnotism be aware also of the following. There are thousands of hypnotists associated together or operating alone for fun and profit. The lack of qualifications that would enable a person to do productive therapy may or may not prevent a hypnotist from becoming a member of these associations.

Two nationwide groups of hypnotists do set adequate standards for and demand appropriate professional qualifications of anyone trying to become a Registration number from the Dept. of Registration and Education. No one who is qualified will be offended at member. These two self-policing groups are the Society for Clinical and Experimental Hypnosis (SCEH) and the American Society of Clinical Hypnosis (ASCH).

The prudent buyer of hypnotherapy should definitely beware of allowing his most suggestible and pliable subconscious mind to be entrusted to a hypnotist who cannot meet the professional standards of one of these two groups. Once the buyer is certain that a given hypnotist is truly so qualified, he will soon become aware that an adequate therapist is not limited to hypnotherapy, but that hypnotism is only one of many tools.

So, buyer, beware!! and ask to see that certificate of membership in ASCH or SCEH or the Illinois State your asking for such certification; you should most certainly overcome your tendency to embarrassment and ask for it — demand to see it. This should be the minimum starting point in getting assurance that the therapist, be he psychologist, psychiatrist, medical practitioner, or hypnotherapist, is more likely to use the awesome power of hypnotism in a professional and responsible manner.

'In football, struggle's the thing'

Watching football on TV is a pleasure. I usually watch a game in which the Bears or Green Bay confront some powerhouse. I also watch or listen to Northwestern, Indiana or Iowa in Big 10 contests. My enthusiasm grows when one of these comes out on top against an overloaded opponent. The last three Bears' games are examples of a team striving for victory without relenting.

When Northwestern or one of the lesser lights in the Big Ten plays Ohio State or Michigan I am always with the team the TV and radio announcers sneer at. I love it when an underdog team battles Goliath to a standstill even for just half a game. It's a wonderful example of guts. I notice the whining from the big boys when events don't quite go their way — fits of picque such as kicking yard markers or swinging at someone. Announcers of games are probably not philosophers and, perhaps, have read little history, so can't be expected to relish the struggle itself. They put their mouths where the money is, and losers make no money for the media.

Yet, if one looks at history, one finds examples that arouse the admiration of generations. We don't praise Goliath for fighting David. We shout for David because he knocked Goliath on his rear end. We get a charge out of George Rogers Clark fooling General Hamilton. We don't laud the Persians for overpowering the Greeks. We do remember Leonidas for stopping the great Persian army in its tracks. History of mankind is full of little winners who will never be forgotten and big winners who were just the heroes of the moment. We were raised on Jack, the Giant Killer!

Media announcers moan, sneer at and ridicule the losers out on the field fighting desperately. The announcers were great strategists in their day and gallantly led their teams to victory. Too bad I can't recall them. One unpalatable remark is, "Oh, He will make a great pro!" Is the making of pros what college football is all about? If so, why not give a degree in football to players who point for the pro career?

Or better, set up a pro organization to assist colleges in the development of needed players. It could draw available prep players and scatter them about in the colleges to suit pro needs. It could work with coaching staffs to improve training and scheduling methods. In fact, it could hlep finance college football! In time, the organization could reach down into senior and junior high schools also. A great ideal! What?

'Reform would help drivers speed'

This letter is written in opposition to the letter by Pam Kilter of PAST that appeared in The Daily Herald on November 15. In recap, People Against Stalled Traffic, PAST, wants the state to institute a law "prohibiting the use of the left-hand lane with (sic) traffic on any two or more lane one direction road or four or more lane two direction road for anything but passing, which must be completed within 1½ miles" so she may not get "stuck behind a creeper" or in the case of two "creepers" side-by-side, "stalled traffic."

PAST's plan has some obvious flaws:

1. In the Chicagoland area many of these types of roads have left-hand lane exit ramps. Shall we ask the state to close them and not let people exit these roads until reaching Indiana or Milwaukee?

2. Calling Illinois "one of the most traffic congested areas in the country" is a real fallacy. Obviously, Ms. Kilter has never driven in New York, Los Angeles, Tampa or Minneappolis. These areas have less traffic but more congestion.

According to Gary Lee, WBBM radio traffic reporter, a 15-mile back-up in four to six lanes on the Kennedy Expressway (one of the world's busiest) is common during rush hour.

Averaging five lanes, PAST elimlnates the left-hand lane except for passing. We now have 20 per cent more traffic in the other 4 lanes which extends the back-up to 18 miles. Of course, no one would be using the left-hand lane because a pass could not be completed in 1½ miles.

Using this plan, stalled traffic has not been eliminated, but increased.

3. Ms. Kilter does not state the speed at which a "creeper" is "cruising." I would assume to an "aggressive driver," as she must be, a "creeper" would be someone driving at about 55 m.p.h., the legal maximum speed limit for any road. Does PAST expect the state to pass a law permitting "aggressive" drivers to speed?

4. Ms. Kilter does not explain why readers should offer suggestions "on how to further our cause quickly." If we get rid of a few obstacles for "aggressive drivers," is their disease (i.e., speed addiction) going to be cured, therefore making the roads safer for all of us?

In a similar plea for action on the part of motorists everywhere, I ask them to join a different PAST — People Against Stupid Tailgaters (sometimes called "aggressive drivers").

Also, please drop a line to Congressman Abner Mikva suggesting he not waste the taxpayers' time and money on this asinine endeavor.

His life was unlike his books

One of the many losing combinations for a man is to be obsessed with a strong conscience and a weak will. This type cannot resist any of the attractive sins and, having recovered from the pleasure, flogs himself to death with guilt.

Usually, he is friendless. Horatio Alger is a good example. He wrote stories for boys. They opened with a poor but honest youngster shivering in the snow as he tried to sell a few newspapers so that his mother could afford potatoes to drop in to a cauldron of hot water.

They closed with the triumph of virtue over avarice; the kid became famous and rich and married the shy, beautiful daughter of the banker. Alger wasn't anything like his heroes. He was, at best, an immoral coward — the worst kind.

HE WAS BORN in Revere, Mass., in January 1834. His father, Dr. Horatio Alger, was a puritanical minister. Anything the boy wanted to do was sinful, and the kid was precocious for openers. His father said that "Holy Horatio" would become a minister.

Dr. Alger was showing his sonscriptures; the devil was showing dirty pictures. The boy went off to Harvard Divinity School. While trying to save the soul of a jezebel, he tried to marry her. Pop saved him from himself.

Horatio dropped out of school and into bad company. The sight of women set him into a frenzy. In 1860, when the South was talking tough and the North was still listening, Alger fled to Paris.

He was 26. Whatever it takes, he had. He prowled the Left Bank in the gaslit nights hunting his prey while, of course, the prey was hunting Horatio. He sinned all night and punched his chest hollow all day.

SOMETHING HAD to give. It was his chest. The Civil War was ending when Horatio returned to Brewster, Mass., and had himself ordained.

The Rev. got himself a church but found that he was still revved up. He was preaching against sin and drooling. Horatio told someone that he was losing his mind. He fled to New York. He may have been daffy, but he wasn't a hypocrite.

Alger decided to become a fine novelist. He would write great books about the metropolis. The publishers read his manuscripts and held their noses. He moved to a cheap room on the East Side and offered to do charitable work at the Newsboys' Lodging House.

He was in a rut. Once more he fled to Paris. There he fell in love with a girl who thought Horatio was the greatest invention since gunpowder. Shortly after the honeymoon, our hero was in a hospital classified as "temporarily insane."

THE WORD "temporarily" got him out. He skulked off to a sailing vessel and returned to New York. He wrote rags-to-riches novels about the poor newsboys. His books sold for three cents, then five cents in paperback.

He wrote "Ragged Dick," "Luck and Pluck," "Tattered Tom," "From Canal boy to President," "Frank's Campaign or What a Boy Can Do" and 114 others. He wrote as though he had pre-invented Xerox. Alger's books sold in the millions.

In time, his conscience won the final battle. He earned a fortune and gave it away faster than the publishers could mail it. The money went to orphan boys and to women of the streets. He loved the city but he hated poverty. The world was harsh, but Horatio wanted to buy consideration, peace and love.

HE WAS, in sum, a bit around the bend. At the age of 62, he felt he could write no more. He was broke. His sister had a home in Natick, Mass. She invited Holy Horatio to spend his final days with her.

For three years, he walked the sand dunes. He was a lonely, graying figure wearing a heavy cape, the winter winds tearing at his face and the howl assailing his ears with a promise of punishment to come.

He goes down in history as one of the minor mistakes of genetics. Had Horatio been born a hundred years later — 1934 — he would now be publishing his secret diaries. Alger could have become the porno king of the world. Today it would mean more than riches.

Who knows? He might have become reborn . . .

Mideast peace mission a media event

Charles B. Seib

We can't be sure just how big a step for peace President Anwar Sadat's mission to Jerusalem was, but it certainly was a giant step for television.

Never was an historic event so completely dominated by a news medium. At times it was hard to decide whether the networks were reporting history or shaping it. TV was an instrument of foreign policy.

Television's omnipresence had its good side. President Carter expressed it when he spoke of the joining of the "hearts and minds of all people" in thanksgiving and prayer. To the extent that there was such a mass involvement in what happened in Jerusalem, television was responsible.

IT ALSO HAD ITS bad side. There was an unsettling similarity between the Jerusalem coverage and the football coverage with which it sometimes alternated — a preoccupation with the score and with instant appraisal. Perhaps truly momentous events need the filter of time before they are ready for general consumption.

The whole episode should be called the Cronkite Initiative. Sadat has said he got to thinking about the trip as a result of a question asked him last April by Wolf Blitzer, a reporter for the Jerusalem Post. And several weeks ago he said he was willing to go before the Knesset.

But it was Walter Cronkite's back-to-back television interviews with Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin on Nov. 14 that transformed an interesting idea into a media event.

IT WAS Cronkite who, while millions watched, moved the principal players from the general to the specific. He did it with an old and perfectly legitimate reporter's device. In the first interview, which was with Sadat, Cronkite asked: "If you get that formal invitation, how soon are you prepared to go."

Sadat was indefinite. He said he would like to go at "the earliest possible time."

Cronkite bored in: "That could be, say, within a week."

Sadat, after a barely discernible pause: "You could say that, yes."

IMMEDIATELY, CRONKITE and his associates in Isreal went to work. And such are the miracles of television and the prestige of the world's No. 1 anchorman that within a few hours the interview with Begin was under way.

After the preliminaries, Cronkite told Begin: "He hinted to me this morning that he thought it might be possible that he would be going to Isreal, if the invitation was forthcoming, within a week or so." Cronkite's suggestion had become Sadat's hint.

Begin said that was "very good news." Five days later the leaders of Isreal and Egypt were shaking hands at Ben Gurion airport.

Cronkite's coup set off ferocious competition among the networks that continued through the weekend. Roone Arledge, News/Sports boss of ABC, said his network was the real catalyst. Sadat told ABC's man in Cairo that he was ready to go to Israel before he told Cronkite, according to Arledge, and Begin indicated to ABC's man in Tel Aviv that he would issue the necessary invitation.

BUT NONE OF THAT came into our homes in living color. So it might as well not have happened.

When it became know that Sadat would go to Jerusalem on Saturday, the superstars of all three netowrks — Cronkite, of course, for CBS; Barbara Walters for ABC, and John Chancellor for NBC — headed for the Middle East. All three managed to get on the plane with Sadat.

After the Sunday speeches to the Knesset and before Sadat and Begin got down to work in private, Cronkite and Walters both interviewed the two men. Walters got her joint interview first, for broadcast on the ABC late news that night. But then Cronkite got his, for use as the opener on CBS's "60 Minutes' shortly after 7 p.m. ABC won that contest, thought, by carving a six-minute segment out of the Walters interview and using it at 5:50 p.m.

NBC's chance came later. Chancellor got his interview just before Sadat returned to Cairo last Monday morning. So he trailed Cronkite and Walters in time, but he talked to Sadat and Begin after thier private discussions were concluded.

THE COMPETITIVE frenzy underscored some questions:

Can age-old, infinitely complex disputes between peoples be dealt with before the television cameras? Can they even be dealt with in private negotiations that are periodically interrupted so the principals can go before the cameras?

Live television is awesome in its ability to take us anywhere in the world. It was an exciting experience to be at the airport when Sadat met Golda Meir and to hear him address the parliament of a country with which his country was still at war.

But what about the morning after? Were expectations raised unduly to satisfy television's vast appetite, and were antagonisms exacerbated by the sustained high pitch? If so, did that cancel out the mass joining of hearts and minds that television made possible?

THE ANSWERS WILL come later. For now we can savor a heady, emotional weekend that had moving moments and ridiculous ones.

Inanities abounded, as they always do when there is air time to be filled. I didn't see all the coverage, so I can't award any prizes. But Chancellor concluded NBC's catch-up interview with Sadat and Begin last Monday morning with a question that belongs to posterity.

"Prime ministers," he asked Begin, "do you think this is bigger than both of you?"

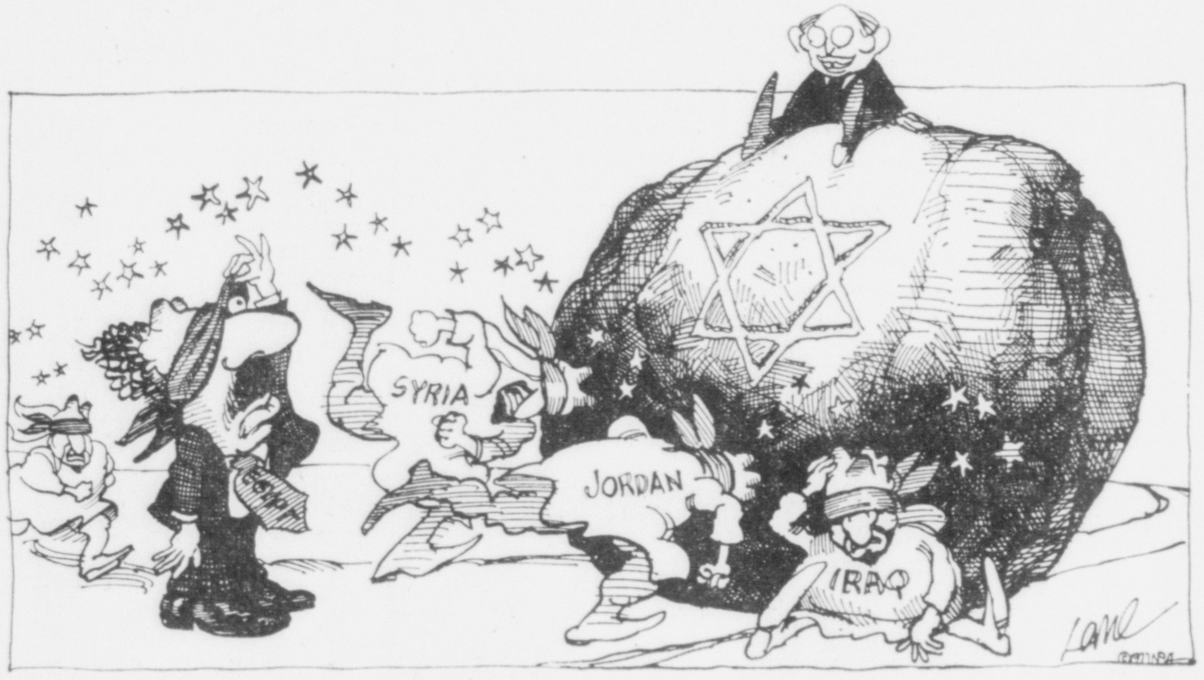

Begin conceded that is was.

IN A RECENT column, I said that Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and his aides made sure that no reporters would be in the courtroom when the Justice Dept.'s plea bargain with former CIA Director Richard Helms was consummated.

Not so, Bell said last week in a speech to newspaper publishers. He said although reporters were not told the Helms case was going to work, nothing was done to prevent them from attending. He explained, as he had at the time, that secrecy was necessary because Helms could have changed his mind the last minute. If he had, Bell said disclosure of the plea bargaining could have damaged his right to a fair trail.

Sadat's trip like Sears' maneuver

by ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John Sears probably appreciated Anwar Sadat's trip to Israel.

Sears, it will be recalled, was the brains of the Ronald Reagan campaign for the Republican presidential nomination in 1976. The word "brains" is not used sarcastically in this case. Even though Reagan lost the nomination, his campaign was masterfully planned and, considering the odds against anyone challenging an incumbent president in his own party, extremely well executed.

The connection between Sears and Sadat is the kind of situation both men faced and the way they chose to confront it.

AS THE 1976 primaries wound down, it became clear that while Reagan was going to go to the Kansas City convention with enough delegates to make a real fight, he would not have the number needed to win the nomination.

Sears was faced with several prospects. The first was to play safe, hold on to the delegates already in the fold, and try to make a breakthrough at the convention. That might reduce the chances to win the nomination, but it would assure Reagan of a pulpit from which to speak to the party and a loyal following to cheer him on.

The other option was to take a gamble to break up what appeared to be a rapidly solidifying situation: To try to win the nomination before the convention with a dramatic bid for uncommitted or shaky Ford delegates.

Sears chose the second, risky alternative. He talked Reagan into tapping liberal Republican Sen. Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania as his vice presidential choice well ahead of the convention and then went looking for delegates who were on the fence or looking for a reason to abandon the Ford ship.

HE FOUND A FEW, but not enough to start the kind of momentum that Reagan needed to break Ford's tightening grip. Some believe Sears had a good idea but made a poor choice to carry it out; Schweiker lacked the influence to pull anyone else with him into the Reagan fold. So the gamble failed, and the Reagan campaign was left with a few tired convention manuevers to attempt, unsuccessfully.

Compare Reagan's political position in the late spring of 1976 with the Egyptian president's now.

Sadat has been the leader of the Arab bloc demanding, at the minimum, that Israel return its conquered territories and provide for the displaced Palestinians. As long as he stood fast on that line, Sadat's position in the Arab world probably would have been unassailable.

BUT NOTHING really was happening. American-led diplomacy was making glacial progress, at best, toward convening a peace conference and no one really knew what good would be accomplished even if a Geneva meeting was set up. Talk of another war was becoming commonplace. And Sadat's Egypt, with no oil to finance either its war machine or domestic economic improvement, was sinking.

So Sadat, like Sears, decided to go for broke. In traveling to Israel, he took a step so bold that one journalist who has just written a novel about Middle Eastern diplomacy commented no publisher would have accepted it as a premise for a work of fiction.

Sadat's gamble may not work. But he proved himself to be a daring crapshooter, and that is something John Sears knows about.

Leaders look to 'key year' to help Scouting

by NANCY GOTLER

After surviving 67 years of change and outlasting charges of irrelevancy, the Boy Scouts of America and its Northwest Suburban Council may be in trouble.

Since 1974, local membership has declined 2,200, or 15 per cent, and Scouting officials cite similar losses nationally.

Detractors point to the old-fashioned Boy Scout image as the reason for the drop in popularity.

BUT ADMINISTRATORS insist the problem lies not with the program's ability to attract boys but with adult apathy, the breakup of the traditional family and declining school enrollments.

"Nobody is turning off Scouting," J. C. Peck, finance director of the Northwest Suburban Council, said. "There has been a small, but steady decline for the last four or five years, but it's not because boys are no longer interested.

"If there is one single factor in the loss of membership it's the lack of the necessary number of adults to volunteer as leaders," he said. "There are more one-parent families and working mothers who don't have time for Scouting.

"And secondly," he said, "there are less available boys. Look at the number of schools closing in our area."

PECK'S SENTIMENTS are echoed by other officials who insist Scouting remains vital and that the setback is temporary.

"There is a feeling on the part of some adults that Scouting is dying," said Robert Klich, president of the Northwest Suburban Boy Scout Council. "We don't believe that. We're concerned about the losses but we don't think they're permanent. We are confident we can turn them around."

The council's 5,500 adult volunteers last year served 12,506 boys between ages 8 and 16 from Skokie to Schaumburg.

Although 21.5 per cent of local boys eligible for the program joined in 1976, the figure was as high as 26 per cent several years ago, Peck said.

NATIONAL officials, such as Merritt Daane, director of a six-state region that includes Illinois, insist that Scouting's image is not turning away prospective members.

"We are only experiencing a reflection of the problems of society," he said. "The same social forces that are affecting the rest of the nation are affecting us — increased family mobility, one parent homes, social unrest.

"We're having the same trouble as churches and other organizations getting volunteers," Daane said. "But we're not overly concerned and are convinced the program will continue to be vibrant."

Despite official insistence that Scouting's troubles are external, some, such as Explorer Scout Don Price, 19, of Arlington Heights, blame the membership decline on the organization's refusal to update its image.

"There's a stigma attached to Boy Scouts, and it's keeping the membership down," Price said. "The Boy Scouts have made a bad image for themselves and a lot of Scoutmasters are complaining about it and dropping out.

"SOME OFFICIALS think there's still such a thing as a chaste, pure, all-American kid, but there isn't," he said. "And the purity aspect turns kids off."

Those charges of irrelevance will not prompt officials to modernize the program. Instead, Peck said, the emphasis is on "getting back to basics."

"In the past we spun our wheels becoming relevant and made some changes that backlashed and hurt us," he said. "From now on we are going to concentrate on educating the public about who we are and do everything possible to support our sponsoring institutions."

Some supporters worry that as membership dwindles more than numbers of Scouts will be lost.

"I'm convinced that the loss in membership is related to the rise in vandalism in the area," Klich said. "It just stands to reason that if a kid is occupied with a program like Scouting he's less likely to get into trouble."

Despite several years of mounting problems, including shrinking of professional recruiting staffs forced by an economic squeeze, Scouting officials say they are convinced the future has promise.

"WE'RE ALREADY seeing a resurgence of volunteers to all programs," Daane said. "This will be a key year for us."

Local administrators, who predict no less in membership this year over 1976, are even mor optimistic.

"For years the Boy Scouts stood on their reputation," Peck said. "Then in the late '60s we had to work hard to sell the program. Now people are starting to select Scouting as a solid priority in their lives again.

"Society is changing and the older values are coming back," he said. "Because of that we will remain strong. We've gone through some difficult times, but we see nothing but growth in the future."

Harper finesse delays decision on new campus

Seven months ago, the Harper College Board of Trustees finessed its way out of hiring a master-planning firm that some trustees feared would set the college on an irreversible course toward building a second campus.

The date was April 18 — just nine days after the election that unseated three incumbent board members and replaced them with three newcomers wary of building classrooms the college may not be able to fill.

That night, the board was due to select one of four architectural firms to help revise the college's 11-year-old master plan. But new trustees Jan Bone, Joan Klussmann and David Tomchek asked the selection tabled until they could have time to study the architects' proposals.

Ever since, the board has come under fire for what critics view as an inexcusable delay in mapping Harper's plans for the future. But Mrs. Klussmann defends the action this way:

"The concern crept in that if you only limited yourself to architectural firms when the board wanted alternatives to cope with rising enrollments, the temptation might be too great to go to an architectural solution."

TODAY, THE firms under consideration are not architects but educational consultants. One reason, of course, is the current board's aversion to architects. But another is that the board rejected a costly staff reorganization proposed by former Harper Pres. Robert E. Lahti that would have freed top college personnel to work on the master plan.

As a result, responsibility for enrollment projections and academic planning originally delegated primarily to college officials will be shared with the consultant — a switch current board members believe will produce a more objective view of the need for a second campus.

Board members believe, too, that they will get a truer picture of alternative methods of accommodating increasing enrollment now that Lahti is not around to champion the second-campus cause.

Lahti was forced to resign two weeks ago after the board agreed to pay him more than $75,000 to break his contract.

Harper master plan under way

college; and second, because it is an opportunity to get a spectrum of views on what Harper's priorities should be.

"Are there any areas in the curriculum that need strengthening, or any areas we should drop?" Board Chairwoman Shirley Munson said she wants to know. "Are we providing enough courses in the liberal arts transfer programs to meet student needs? Are the continuing education needs of the community being fulfilled?"

Board members have long regarded the answers to those questions as a key factor in the decision whether or not to build a second campus on the 117-acre site the college owns at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads in Wheeling Township.

Since the master plan also will project enrollment and academic trends and recommend what facilities will be needed to accommodate any future growth, its otucome will probably settle the second-campus question once and for all.

But college officials expect the master-planning process to take as much as a year. It could be even longer before the board decides whether there is a second campus in Harper's future.

Soviet arms buildup no threat: Aspin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., says Soviet military might is growing but not at a rate indicating the Russians are planning an armed showdown with the West.

Aspin, a former Defense Dept. analyst, said Sunday his own studies show recent Soviet military expansion has been "far less dramatic than many scare stories would lead us to believe."

He rejected claims by some U.S. military leaders that Soviet armed might is growing as rapidly as that of Nazi Germany before World War II.

"So far as Soviet intentions can be deduced from the trends in their military program, they are not as hostile as some have portraped them to be," Aspin said.

IN A 20-PAGE report, Aspin cited various indicators — including the level of military spending, manpower, and numbers of aircraft, tanks and warships — that he said could be used to estimate military intentions.

These figures he said, showed Soviet rate of military expansion of recent years had been dwarfed by the Nazis in the 1930s.

Aspin emphasized that he was comparing only the rates of growth in military might, not the absolute military power of the various nations.

He suggested Soviet military spending might be inspired more by "the need to face the growing challenge from China" Than a desire for a showdown with the West.

Some military analysts have expressed concern over the continuing Soviet buildup at a time when American military spending is declining.

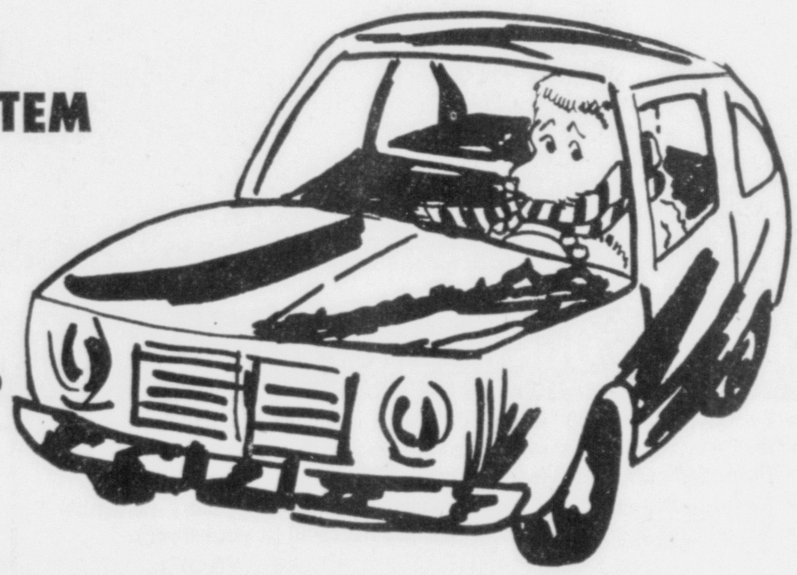

Aspin said Soviet military spending is increasing steadily by about 3 per cent a year and that equipment is being added at about the rate needed to replace aging equipment.

In the past, he has urged "a spending increase in real terms" and has suggested a 2 per cent boost. The Carter administration is pledged to a 3 per cent increase.

Whatever became of Jan Schwettman?

by ELEANOR RIVES

You remember Jan Schwettman, don't you?

She's that one-woman high voltage package of strength, energy, determination and purpose who brought 10 Northwest suburbs around to her way of thinking.

And they are glad she did. The Northwest suburbs now have one of the finest mobile intensive care units in the country. Let's hear it for the paramedics. Let's hear it for Jan.

Jan believes in the power of the individual. She believed in it before the paramedic idea entered her mind. "You don't always need an organization behind you," she said. "People lose sight of what you can do as a person. Find something that needs doing — and do it."

IN 1968, WHEN HER daughters were on their way to becoming young women and Jan had gone the wife/mother/homemaker/clubwoman route for a good many years, she found something that needed doing. That something was in Appalachia.

For the next three years, she arranged for the collection and distribution of medicine, clothing, books, playground equipment, films, even sewing machines to the poverty-stricken hollows of a Kentucky county and to its struggling day-care center. She made several trips there herself.

All as a volunteer.

One October day in 1971, the Inverness woman chanced to hear a segment of a television show featuring a doctor who had developed a mobile heart car unit. Not long before this, a friend's husband had died of a heart attack on the way to the hospital. Something didn't make sense. Something needed doing.

SO JAN TRAVELED from one end of the country to the other assessing the emergency medical services available. Then she put together a proposal based on the existing facilities here and, early in 1972, presented it to the village boards of nine suburbs.

One by one, they approved the plan and allocated funds. She took her proposal to the president of the first hospital on her list — Northwest Community, Arlington Heights. When legal problems loomed, she called the governor of Illinois. She contacted five major medical associations. She persuaded State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, to be legislative sponsor of the Illinois paramedic law. She went to Springfield and testified.

All on a volunteer basis.

AND WHEN ALL those hurdles had been passed, she invited Pat Nixon to the dedication. Just like that. Tricia came in her place.

The first mobile intensive care network in Illinois set a record: it became operative in December 1972, 11 months after Jan had initiated work on the program. It involved 216 men from 17 communities. And 13 minutes after it became operative, the first life was saved.

Happy Ending. Or rather, beginning. But Jan fell apart. "I went to Hawaii to rest," she said. "I felt so empty — what would I do now?"

It was all waiting for her. First on the plane back to Los Angeles. A man collapsed. The only doctor on board was unfamiliar with cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). So were the crew members. Jan took over.

"I taught 17 persons CPR at 35,000 feet," she said.

HER FUTURE JELLED a little more on the plane to Chicago. The man sitting next to her was extremely interested in her work promoting emergency medical services, so interested that he contacted her several months later at home.

Jan had not been sitting on her hands. Since the establishment of the mobile intensive care network in the Northwest suburbs, she had carried its message to 46 other communities over a period of five years.

"The man on the plane turned out to be a Barrington philanthropist," she said. "He asked if I would direct a foundation dealing in prehospital care to stimulate other communities to improve their services."

He set up the foundation. In May 1974, Jan became its director. She became a paid professional.

AS DIRECTOR of the Public Safety Foundation, Jan supervised base level and instructor level training of as many as 1,000 persons in a single year to give CPR within one minute of a heart attack. These included FBI agents, schoolchildren, and representatives of the Federal Aviation Authority, American Medical Assn., American Hospital Assn. and State Board of Elections.

The pilot program for Emergency Medical Procedures in Chicago office buildings was instituted.

She developed informational materials for correspondents throughout the nation. She directed a grant program that gave select communities the foundation's expertise in helping improve local emergency medical services.

"THE FOUNDATION sent me all over the U.S. — to places that have no more than basic emergency services," she said. "Like Nevada. I rode ambulances all over Reno helping establish a full paramedic program."

Under her direction, the foundation sponsored forums and symposiums, and directed a major impact study. Jan extolled the benefits of emergency medical services at every possible opportunity — on TV, radio, for conferences and organizations.

She wrote a slide-cassette presentation, "History of Emergency Medical Services," produced by Universal Studio 8. She wrote a book, "Journal of a Happening," an exciting account of her involvement with the program in Illinois.

Jan soon will be going to Oklahoma to be narrator and technical adviser for a Health Research Associates film, "Your Brother's Keeper." She recently was appointed by Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson to the state's 10-member Mobile Intensive Care Advisory Board.

HOW COULD ALL this happen to the suburban housewife who happened to catch a small segment of a TV program?

"Timing in life is so important," Jan said. "Also realizing what you have going for you and putting it to work. Everybody has some talent. I feel sorry for people who don't recognize what they have to give. If a person is blessed with certain gifts, they need to be used.

"Whatever one does with his life, it should leave the world a little better than it was. That makes life a joy and a pleasure."

As for the future, Jan intends to stay in the emergency medical field as long as she "can ride an ambulance as a passenger and not on the stretcher."

Whatever happened to Jan Schwettman? She has been busy — very busy.

"YOU DON'T ALWAYS need an organization to get things started," says Jan Schwettman, Inverness, whose drive and determination made mobile intensive care a reality in the Northwest suburbs. "This paramedic thing wouldn't have had the impact nor moved so fast if I hadn't worked as an individual. I didn't have to call a committee meeting and wait three weeks for each decision."

Parents should think of themselves as much as the kids

The rules of raising kids don't rule anymore

All you parents: take it easy on yourself.

Here are some ways to get started:

•Don't bite your nails over failing to heed the child-raising rules from Dr. Benjamin Spock, Dr. Lee Salk, and other experts who make or made their living telling you how to parent — as the art of child-raising is called these days.

• Don't think all is lost because you didn't tell junior the facts of life before he was out of the sandbox.

• Don't become suicidal because child's career development plan isn't solidified by the time he's 10.

• Don't feel you're related to a rat when you decide against being pals with the kids.

• Don't be afraid to demand that the schools simply teach reading, writing and arithmetic — and maybe a little world history.

• Don't worry about injuring your kid's psyche when you blow your top. Parents have a right to blow their tops. And the kid's psyche? Well — it might be bad if you don't rough it up on occasion.

• It's okay to play down all the lesson stuff, too. Tennis, golf, ballet, piano, fingerpainting, ceramics, sculpting, kite flying, top-twirling. You won't cheat your child if he doesn't get enriched by all that. He's exposed to all that, anyway. It's questionable that it will make much real difference.

THE TIPS are not from a book that might be titled, "The Backward Book of Child Raising."

Rather, they are part of what a child psychologist from the University of Chicago calls the hottest trend in child-raising today.

Dr. Bertram J. Cohler, associate professor at the university's department of behavorial sciences, said the trend is that a lot of theories are being questioned by maverick psychologists.

"We have not found any strong evidence to date," he said, "that a lot of theories work.

"Psychologists are re-examining older developmental data and I think it's going to throw the United States Office of Child Development into a tizzy — and the National Institutes of Health."

AND, THEN, there are the people who write child-raising books.

Cohler's contribution to upsetting the child-raising cart of theories was a lengthy study of the headstart program — a costly federal program meant to give poor children a helping hand in the pre-school years.

It's Cohler's professional judgment that Headstart doesn't do much good. Besides, as he sees it — most kids turn out, no matter what. They just do — it's a part of the human condition and natural development.

One of the ways he backs this up: fewer than 10 per cent of the kids who grow up in poor urban areas turn out poorly.

All the rest — exposed to rotten environments, no enrichment, perhaps even gutter life — grow up okay in spite of their deprived childhoods.

IT IS HIS theory, by the way, that kids of the great depression in the '30s turned out to be better adults than the coddled kids of the '60s raised by liberal parents in the child-be-all period.

Cohler believes the miserable showing of young Americans in the '60s is proof that the liberal theories in the child-raising arena didn't work.

"And that's why we're throwing out a lot of theories," he said.

For example, one theory in child raising likens kids to trees. "As the twig is bent the tree will grow."

That might be okay for trees but it's not the way humans develop. They grow and develop in stages and put something from the past and something of the future into their development.

THERE'S NOT much anyone can do about programming the lifelong human development to make a person something it's not in nature's cards for him to be.

Some of Cohler's theories on child-raising and child development:

• Schools should teach reading, writing, arithmetic and some world history. For 12 years. That's all students need to know to get started in life. Teaching economics, psychology and sociology is folly. Students aren't ready for it.

• Being pals with your kids blurs the generation line. Kids should know they are kids and parents are adult. (Cohler is leader of Cub Scout Pack 4504 in Chicago, a pack to which his 10-year old belongs. He also has a son, 7. He does not consider the work with Cub Scouts as being pals.)

• Keep your problems to yourself. Don't burden your kids.

• Sex education happens. Kids learn from the best teachers in their own time, their peers. They learn better than if the parents teach them. Besides, too many facts too early robs a child of a chance to fantasize about sexual feelings — a necessary stage of development.

• All boys 9 to 12 should be taken out of school and put in something like a CCC Camp, forestry-type camps that were activated in America during the great depression of the '30s. They are very uncomfortable in school. Keeping them in school is a waste of their time and a waste of money. They could learn something useful in a camp — how to use their bodies.

• Girls of this age should stay in school. That's what they do best at those ages. Boys are lousy students until adolescence. Then they turn around and pass up the girls.

• Segregated classes or schools may be the best. Schools for girls. Schools for boys.

• All parents need to do is provide warmth, guidance, support, and food.

• Parents and kids should respect one another. If your kid is a sloth and keeps a messy room, tell him you like neatness. Have him clean it up "for your sake." It won't ruin his life.

• Set standards. We're out of the era of being liberal parents. The failures among the kids of the '60s are proof that not setting standards is no way to raise children.

• Career education? Forget it. There is a time for trying things out — jobs, skills and such. That time is called youth. Let it happen to your kids. Career education will never take the place of the natural trying out that occurs as young persons develop into adults and start their way through life.

The big three development periods in life are: 5 to 7; adolescence and middle age.

Middle age is when people face the fact they are not going to live forever, stop looking back, start looking forward, figuring what to do with the rest of their lives.

Middle age and adolescence happen in the typical family at one time. The parents are middle age and in a big change period. The kids are in adolescence and in a big change period.

They are humans in crisis — but at different ages. Or stages.

And helps explain why teen-agers and parents don't get along so well. Teen-agers are getting ready to leave the family and go out into the world. Parents are thinking of what they will be able to do before they leave the world.

CONTRARY TO the edicts of some child-rearing experts, the perfect parent need not be a pal to a child, need not teach sex education in the home and need not worry about blowing his or her top.

The doctor says

Reducing club ripoff in protein additive

My friends and I are taking protein powder twice a day, along with vitamin E and B-6. This is supposed to help us lose weight. We are wondering if there is a danger in taking too much protein, and how much is too much? Also, are the vitamins E and B-6 necessary?

We belong to a new club and are using the products the club is selling us. Are we harming ourselves in any way?

If you don't mind throwing your money away, you are not harming yourself.

The protein ripoff is widespread. Your body only uses a limited amount of protein each day to replace tissues or form compounds such as enzymes that are made up of the amino acids in proteins.

For women without any bizarre protein losing disease and who are not pregnant, the Recommended Daily Dietary Allowance (considerably more than the Minimal Daily Requirement) is less than 50 grams of protein a day. You will get that much in a half pound of lean meat, chicken or fish, without counting the protein in milk and other foods.

What happens to the extra protein — surprise, surprise. Your body simply uses it for its calorie value, and a gram of protein has the same calorie value as a gram of carbohydrate. If that increases your calorie intake more than your body uses, the extra calories can be converted to body fat. Isn't that just great for a reducing program! You are really taking a food supplement.

Proteins are made up of amino acids and these can be converted to glucose. Scientists call this process gluconeogenis (forming new glucose) by the liver, and the excess glucose can be converted to fat. Other amino acids from protein are converted directly to fatty acids and used as fat. These we call ketogenic. But glucogenic, ketogenic, or what have you, the important thing for all to remember before being had by the protein rip-off is that the amino acids in protein that you don't use for building are simply converted to fat and glucose, and used like all the other sources of fat and carbohydrate in your food. Taking extra protein, then, is just an indirect way of consuming more fat and carbohydrate.

If you are serious about losing weight, you need only follow a good, sensible program of a well balanced, low caloric diet and a good daily exercise program.

Vitamine E has no role at all in helping a persons lose fat. In general, it is an inactive substance. Most of the benefits some think they get from it are all psychological. You might as well put distilled water in a capsule and sell it to most people. A well balanced diet will provide all the vitamin E you need.

Vitamin B-6 will not cause you to lose fat either. It has been included in a number of fad weight reducing schemes, but your body will only use so much vitamin B-6, and the excess is eliminated in your urine.

The protein powders and vitamins will not hurt you, but they won't help you lose weight unless they motivate you to follow a calorie-restricted diet and exercise, which really does the job.

Special crystal can increase number size

Dear Roberta: After many years of schooling in preparation for a career, my son used his first paycheck from a new job to buy me a gold bracelet-watch. Naturally, I cherish it. But I have a problem with it. I can't read the time from its small face. Is there any magnifier I can buy to make the hands visible? — Anna

Call a watch parts suplier to see if they carry a reflective watch crystal with a convex dome called a "rock crystal." Looked at from a certain angle, numbers look larger under one of these. Such a crystal must be fitted according to the shape of the bezel — the upper portion of your watch case. This is a job best done by cutters at a watch wholesaler. If it's not possible to attach such a crystal to your watch, wear it proudly as it is.

Dear Roberta: No matter how low I turn the flame under the frying pan, sizzling butter in it always burns. Can I do anything to prevent this? — Dru Bledsoe

A tablespoon of oil added to the butter or margarine will forestall the burning long enough to permit sauteing. Some of the soft margarines are tuted as "no-burn," too, but tubs of these are expensive if you buy the product only for sauteing.

Dear Roberta: Have you ever used cellophane tape for a quick clean-up of part of a rug? One night recently, I vacuumed the dining room rug after dinner. Didn't notice until the vacuum had been put away that I had overlooked a small area. A couple of strips of tape took care of crumbs and lint in no time. — Mrs. Ralph Loring

Your tape trick will eliminate those crumbs on the carpet that come to one's attention just before guests are due to arrive!

Dear Roberta: We couldn't find our little dinner bell for my child to ring to call me from his sickbed. Instead, he used a toy whistle tied to a string that I pinned to his pillowcase. It worked better than a bell, because he could blow signals to me: one toot meant "Come soon," and two toots meant "Hurry!" — Elinor Ayres

Floor pillows add much to any room's appearance

Eunice Farmer

Sew simple

Dear Eunice Farmer: I want to make some floor pillows for Christmas gifts. Would you give me some ideas about size and fabric suggestions? — Mrs. Roy B. L.

Dear Mrs. R.B.L.: Floor pillows are fabulous gifts and are great for just about everyone on your list.

Fabric possibilities are unlimited: You could make them out of corduroy, printed chintz, wool plaid or any textured wool, velveteen, fake fur or heavy upholstery fabrics.

As to size, I think they should be quite large — about 27 to 30 inches square. Often, the width of the fabric and the amount of money you care to spend have some bearing on the measurement, but please don't make them too small or they can't be used to sit on comfortably.

It is recommended that you make an inner pillow out of muslin then stuff it very tightly with polyester stuffing. You won't need to apply a zipper to your inner pillow.

For the outer fabric, cut it to fit the inner pillow snugly, and apply the zipper for easy removal before you machine stitch the pillow together. If the outer pillow appears too loose, you can easily turn it inside out and make your seams a little deeper.

Usually, floor pillows don't have piped or corded edges, but you can add decorative braid or fringe.

Dear Eunice Farmer: I'm a beginner when it comes to sewing and it seems that my most difficult detail to master is stitching a straight seam. Have you any tips? — Sarah Z.

Dear Sarah: This is one detail that seems to plague most sewers, even if they are not beginners.

The first thing to do is mark your seam with a tracing wheel or a sharp-edged piece of chalk. If there is any danger of the color showing through your fabric, though, you must be very selective in your marking.

There are other aids to stitching a straight seam. You can buy a magnetic seam guide that is placed on your machine. When not in use, this guide simply pushes out of the way. Also, seam widths are marked on most sewing machine throat plates.

The secret to using the last two devices is to keep your eye on the marking or the magnetic guide to be sure the edge of the seam is touching the marks. Most women have a tendency to watch the needle instead of the cut edge of the fabric, and this makes for uneven stitching.

Dear Eunice Farmer: Last winter I made my daughter a wool cape and lined it with "fake fur." It was beautiful and my daughter loved it, but she could never wear it because the lining shed on all her clothing. I've tried everything. Can you help? — Thelma J. C.

Dear Thelma: One little tip that has helped some of the gals who have worked with fake fur is to place it in a cool electric clothes dryer and let if fluff out for a few minutes. This will usually eliminate all the loose or clipped fur pile. If this doesn't work, you might try relining the cape with soft velour, lightweight imitation suede cloth, lightweight wool or a lightweight knit.

Spa founder pushes healthy mind as well as good eating, exercise

by ELLIE GROSSMAN

You like having a head full of depression and a stomach full of fast foods that eat away at the body instead of nourishing it?

Then Deborah Szekely Mazzanti does not give a natural fig about you. The short, robust, tan founder of the elite Golden Door Spa in Escondido, Calif. — sitting snugly in a green warmup suit with her sneakers up on a couch in a friend's apartment on Sutton Place — says you're hopeless.

"UNESCO discovered that 15 per cent of the people are tigers," she says. "They'll be active no matter what. Seventy per cent can be taught that exercise and good nutrition can make a change in your life. The bottom 15 per cent no one has ever been able to get to move and I've stopped trying for them."

She has her hands full as it is at the spa, resuscitating Barbra Streisand, the Gabors, even William Holden who spent $1,250 plus 15 per cent gratuities for seven days among 157 acres of gardens, parks, manmade waterfalls, courtyards and Japanese art.

THESE ARE people who've chosen not to "throw garbage" into and onto themselves. "You can live a garbage free life," she says. "For instance, you don't have to be depressed. That's simply sitting and stewing and shirking responsibility for yourself. But if you begin to move, the act of moving works counter to depression."

At the spa, everyone begins to move at 6:30 a.m. and they spend the next 11 hours alternately exerting and resting their bodies. They might go, say, from a calisthenic class to an herbal bath to a hike, a massage, etc. By the end of the week, they're invigorated, relaxed, probably thinner, clear about who they are and what they want from life. And delighted they joined the 29 other guests who ate well if sparingly of food grown and prepared on the grounds; who communed with nature, found joy in it, and left the appointment book, the laundry, in another world.

Now you can do that, too, says Mrs. Mazzanti, for only $12.50, the price of her book, "Secrets of the Golden Door," published by Morrow. All the exercises, the recipes, the philosophy — positive action, positive thinking — are there.

THERE'S JUST one thing. You'll have to do it without benefit of the exercise teachers, beauticians, maids and those Japanese gardens outside each bedroom at the spa. Some neat trick.

"I'm not saying this book is a total substitute," she grants, "but it's the best I can do. The Door is always filled so I'm not trying to promote business with the book. I am trying to promote people staying fit and healthy."

For the reader, the initiation is her own Golden Door weekend. You're to go off to a quiet hotel in the country with some books, sketch pads, whatever. On Saturday all you'll do is align yourself with nature and follow the alternate active-in-active hours practiced at the Door.

THE COUNTRYSIDE is essential, she says, because "to me nature is uplifting. It's very positive. You look at birds and trees and take time to be alone and break away from habit. Saturday is peeling away the onion.

"On Sunday, you start making little decisions about your life." Do you want a new one, blonde hair, a mad affair in Guadaloupe? Set the goals, making sure they're realistic (she can't say how one determines that) and then, well, go out and achieve them.

"True, change won't happen on one weekend," she says, "but again, really negative thinking is a choice no one needs to make."

THAT'S WHY people go to The Golden Door, incidentally. To spruce up their heads. "No one spends all that money to lose a few pounds," she says. "They come for a time to think and plan and feel good about themselves."

All that has been vital to Mrs. Mazzanti since she was a child in Brooklyn, the daughter of a cloak-and-suiter — "He was from Poland and had a dreary life" — and a wealthy, liberated Austrian mother who disguised herself as a man to play in a string quartet. "Women fiddlers didn't work in those days, even in New York."

THEY WERE vegetarians and health addicts and when her father was ruined in the Depression, her mother took the family to Tahiti. "All we could find to eat in New York was bananas. Mother had read that fruits were abundant in Tahiti and she was a woman of action," she recalls smiling.

In Tahiti, the family became fast friends with a Romanian amateur archeologist, philosopher and "health nut," Prof. Edmond Bordeaux Szekely. At 17, Mrs. Mazzanti married him.

"We founded the Rancho La Puerto spa in Baja California in 1940 where 12 guests would pay $17.50 a week for everything. I cooked and taught calisthenics and we tried everp diet and health regimen. But it was very frustrating to work so hard and then see guests return to the city and make the same mistakes. We were just a fat farm which to me was taking advantage of people's frailties instead of their strengths. So I decided to include the psychological approach — positive thinking, allowing ourselves rewards, etc."

In '58, she opened The Golden Door as a 20th anniversary gift to her husband. But then the two spas and two chidren took precedence over him and the marriage dissolved.

That's when she discovered the power of Zen and meditation and that suffering, truly, can be thwarted if you want it to.

It's all there in the book which is sweetly dedicated to her first husband, "The Prof." "After all," she says, "everything I do today is because of him."

IF YOU DON'T value your mind and your body to take care of yourself, Deborah Szekely doesn't care either.

Sterilization case more than suit

Editor's note: Six years ago a young woman was sterilized at her mother's request in what the parent thought was a safety precaution. The woman did not realize what had been done until after her marriage when her husband wanted to know why she was not getting pregnant. Their lawsuit has become an important case on the U.S. Supreme Court's docket. A homeotwn reporter tells the story.

by DAVE KURTZ
Auburn (Ind.) Evening Star

KENDALLVILLE, Ind. — Linda Kay Sparkman just does not seem the type to cause national headlines.

The 21-year-old woman lives in a plain-looking mobile home on the south side of Kendallville. She stays at home with her poodle and likes to keep house.

Her husband, Leo, is a laborer at a factory.

There is one thing unusual about the Sparkmans, however. They can't have children, although they want them.

Six years ago Linda was sterilized. Her mother requested the operation and DeKalb Circuit Judge Harold Stump signed his official approval.

LINDA DID NOT find out about the sterilization until four years later. When she did, she and Leo sued the judge, her mother, and the doctors, lawyer and hospital involved for $3.25

Last month her case reached the U.S. Supreme Court. Because it involves sex and sterilization, it made headlines in newspapers across the country. Because it involves suing a judge, many Supreme Court observers consider "Sparkman vs. Stump" one of the year's most important cases.

For more than 100 years American law has held that a judge can be sued only for the most extreme abuses. Linda's lawyer must convince the court this is one of those cases — or if it is not, the justices should make new, more stringent rules for judicial conduct.

The road to the Supreme Court started six years ago when Linda (her name was Spitler then) was 15 and living in Auburn.

According to her mother's affidavit, Linda had been "leaving the home on several occasions to associate with older youth or young men and as a matter of fact having stayed overnight with said youth or men."

HER MOTHER, Ora McFarlin, put those words in a petition drawn by her attorney, Warren Sunday of Auburn. It asked that sterilization of Linda be permitted "to prevent unfortunate circumstances to occur."

The affidavit said Linda was "considered to be somewhat retarded" although she attended public schools and had been advanced along with others her age.

Mrs. McFarlin signed the affidavit July 9, 1971. That same day it was taken to Judge Stump for official approval. He also signed it that day.

Six days later Linda was taken to DeKalb Memorial Hospital. This time, she said, she was told her appendix would be removed. Instead, her fallopian tubes were cut and tied, apparently sterilizing her forever.

In her lawsuit Linda contends she did not know about the sterilization Aug. 18, 1973, when she married Leo Sparkman. She said she suspected nothing until a few months later when she asked her mother why she had not become pregnant.

THEN, THE SUIT claims, her mother told her her tubes had been tied, but that they would come untied on their own accord. Linda reportedly was warned not to tell Leo for fear he would divorce her.

A few months later, the suit says, she told Leo anyway and the couple had marital problems caused by the inability to have children.

They went to attorney Richard Finley of Kendallville to talk about divorce. He wrote Dr. John Hines of Auburn, who allegedly performed the operation and asked about it. Hines replied he had performed a tubal ligation.

On Nov. 26, 1975, Finley filed suit for the Sparkmans against everyone involved, asking $2.75 million in damages for Linda and $500,000 for Leo's loss of potential fatherhood.

Judge Stump, the suit contends, "did not provide procedural safeguards" for Linda, including some required by the state law on sterilizations at the time. Under Indiana law in 1971, sterilization still was permitted but only on patients in a mental institution.

THE SUIT CHARGES Stump approved the operation "apparently without a hearing, without plaintiff, Linda Kay Sparkman, present and without representation on her behalf."

However, even if the sterilization clearly was illegal, as the lawsuit contends, Linda's case faced a major roadblock. For the same laws that guard her rights also guard the rights of judges. They say a judge cannot be sued merely on the grounds he made a mistake.

In Fort Wayne federal court, Judge Jesse Eschbach decided the rule protected Stump. He said Stump was "clothed with absolute judicial immunity," and dismissed the suit.

The next higher court, however, did not agree. The 7th U.S. Circuit Court in Chicago judges ruled Stump "acted extrajudicially and the doctrine of judicial immunity is inapplicable in this case."

In a strongly worded opinion Justice Luther Swygert said, "The purported judicial action of defendant Stump had no support in statute or previous common law," and that Linda was sterilized "without the slightest steps to insure that her rights were protected."

IF THAT HAD been the end of the story, the case would have gone to trial. Linda's lawyer still would have had to convince a judge or jury she is entitled to damages.

Instead, the Supreme Court agreed to review the Chicago court's ruling.

The high court's action was encouraging to the judge's side, since it makes a change in his favor possible, including possible removal of Stump as a target for the lawsuit while leaving others open to damages.

Many outsiders agree the case is important.

Judges' organizations are reportedly lining up on Stump's side, while civil rights groups are joining forces with the Sparkmans. Both sides may send the juntices "friend of the court" briefs to present their views on the case.

The court also will hear from the lawyers. Finley and George Fruechtenicht of Fort Wayne, representing Stump, will argue before the nine justices sometime early next year.

A few weeks or months later, the Supreme Court will announce its decision. It may set down an important new rule on the limits of immunity for judges. Or it may say the old rule remains and make it more clear.

Either way, the court will decide without ever hearing or seeing Linda Sparkman herself. The case that began when Linda and Leo were seeking a divorce in 1975 has become a much bigger question than the size of the Sparkman family.

CLUB CALENDAR

THE HANDMADE ORNAMENTS are complete and this week Ruth Dodge, Bev Ray, Edie Richiardi and other members of Arlington Heights Garden Club will be trimming the Christmas tree in Arlington Heights Memorial Library. At tonight's meeting in Frontier Park, Mrs. Charles Liebal, flower show judge and landscape design critic, will present "Holiday Design." There is a $1 fee for the program. The club also has planned an evergreen wreath workshop for 7:30 p.m. next Monday in Frontier Park.

League of Women Voters to discuss energy issue

Members of the League of Women Voters of Des Plaines will be asked for their opinions on energy issues at unit meetings Wednesday.

Some of the questions the league is seeking answers to are: what do you think the nation' energy growth rate can and should be by the year 2000?; from now to 2000 what mix of energy sources should the United States use?; what policies and regulatory action should the federal government use to bring about the growth rates and the sources you favor in these questions?

Consensus of the units, which have been studying energy issues this year, will be added to those of all leagues around the country to reach a position on which the leagues will act.

A meeting will be at 9:30 a.m. in the home of Ruth Lang, 488 Amherst Ave. and at 8 p.m. in the home of Anne Evans, 986 Jeannette. The public is invited and those wishing further information may call 297-7187.

'Singles' Bible study

Single parents who feel neglected or out of place in their church's regular Bible study programs are invited to call Dale Finke, 394-1483, regarding a study and Christian Fellowship group now being formed especially for single parents.

Tentative plans are to meet Sunday evenings at Pioneer Park.

Do your own thing

Each member of Des Plaines Garden Club will "do her own thing" at the holiday workshop Thursday in West Park Field House, 651 S. Wolf Rd. Work begins at 10 a.m. with Mrs. Emil Fick and Mrs. Eugene Tamillo assisting members in their chosen projects.

Members will bring their own lunch; dessert and beverage will be served by the committee after which Dorothy Jackson, horticulture chairman, will speak on "Landscaping in Minature." Appropriate plant materials for pots and terrariums will be demonstrated.

Install new officers

At today's meeting of the Arlington Heights Chapter of the American Assn. of Retired Persons, Mrs. L. Kushmer, state AARP director, will install the club's new officers. They are Ellen Hartman, president; Mary Vetter, vice president; Fred Bartz, second vice president; Agnes Maloney, secretary; Allegra Jenks, corresponding secretary; and Ruth Fick, treasurer, all of Arlington Heights. Also Florence Carlson, financial secretary, of Des Plaines.

Members are asked to bring sack lunches to the 10:30 a.m. meeting at Wheeling Township Center, 1616 N. Arlington Heights Rd. Coffee and dessert will be furnished. The installation will follow lunch.

New bosses still at old ratings games

Network news officials must sometimes sit at their sprawling desk and daydream about how easy life would be if things only went their way.

Certainly Roone Arledge must fantasize about the ratings strides ABC's evening news was supposed to make with Barbara Walters and Harry Reasoner in the anchor seats.

Well, Arlege's "nonanchor" approach to the problem, with correspondents passing off to each other during the newscast to work around the anchors and Ms. Walters and Reasoner out in the reporting field with the best of them, hasn't prompted any big ratings improvements either. ABC's evening news still is No. 3.

SO, IT IS REPORTEDLY back to the drawing boards and major changes are coming soon, although no one at this point is willing to speculate. It's worthwhile knowing that Reasoner's contract with the network expires next summer and that he hasn't been really happy sharing the anchordesk with Ms. Walters.

It's also worth remembering that Ms. Walters has proved herself far more precious a commodity hosting her own television interview shows than anchoring the evening news, which could make her a prime candidate for anchoring the prime time news magazine show that ABC still is struggling to put together.

Things are going to be changing plenty at ABC. It's just a matter of time.

Meanwhile, Les Crystal, the president of NBC news, must have nightmares about how he's going to juggle around the grumbling bunch of talent he has on his hands.

AS PREVIOUSLY reported in this column, John Chancellor leaves his anchorman post of the "NBC Nightly News" next year with hopes of moving on to that elite position of maturity — commentator and high-level correspondent.

Of course, even with the recent physical changes in that news operaton's set, not to mention the new format, NBC's ratings have remained second to CBS.

So, the network is looking for some strong new blood for its newscast. Now, when Crystal allows his mind to wander to the land of "Never-Never" but "Sure Would Like to Be," he probably sees "Today" host Tom Brokaw sitting at the nightly news anchor desk saying "Good night, David."

Of course, yanking Brokaw off "Today" — which would probably be just fine with him because he's always yearned for a major anchor job — would mean having to find a new guardian for the morning show.

AS REPORTED HERE last week, two candiates for the job so far seem to be "Tomorrow's" Tom Snyder and Chicago's Phil Donahue. Both are reluctant. Donahue is skeptical about giving up the autonomy of doing his own syndicated talk show and Snyder has his eye set on the "NBC Nighly News" anchordesk.

Snyder reportedly has refused to have any part of the network's planned news magazine show, but there seems little likelihood of his getting the nightly news appointment over Brokaw.

Big changes also are expected at NBC news within the next few months, directed toward making the news organization a bigger threat to No. 1-seeded CBS.

At CBS, news president Richard S. Salant doesn't have to daydream about things that should be.

HIS "CBS EVENING NEWS" is a solid No. 1 and he's got the granddaddy of news on his team. Walter Cronkite never ceases to amaze his followers, only recently playing journalistic diplomat by getting Egypt's Anwar Sadat and Israel's Menahem Begin to agree on their historic meeting.

"THE HONEYMOONERS CHRISTMAS SPECIAL"

CBS also has "the" one and only, all-time great weekly news magazine show, "60 Minutes." So, the only thing left for Salant and company to worry about is maintainning that status for some time and replacing retiring commentator Eric Severeid.

Even in light of the changes brewing over at the other two networks, CBS doesn't have much to worry about yet.

TV NOTES:

Beverly Sills starring in the English version of "The Merry Widow," and a documentary look at entertainers blacklisted as Communists in the 1940s are part of WTTW's "Festival Eleven" through Dec. 11.

This column will highlight some of the more worthwhile programs during the next two weeks, but a few you can look forward to include two concerts by the Vienna Symphony, "Festival in Vienna" with Strauss polkas and Dvorak Slavonic dances Dec. 4 at 6 p.m. and an all-Strauss program in "The Vienna Philharmonic New Year's Eve Concert" at 6 p.m. Dec. 11.

Richard Harris' moving portrait of a lonely artist in "The Snow Goose" airs at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, "Superspy" tells the story of CIA agent and Russian expert Reinhard Gehlen at 9 p.m. Dec. 2, and the "King of Swing," Benny Goodman, performs at Wolf Trap at 9 p.m. Dec. 6.

"The Merry Widow" airs at 8 p.m. today and "Hollywood on Trial" airs at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday. Other programing to watch for is the Rossano Brazzi and Mitzi Gaynor film version of "South Pacific," a National Geographic on the "Yukon Passage" at 9 p.m. Dec. 5 and a profile of an Englishwoman's lone 29-day trip across the Atlantic in "Sea Bird" at 9 p.m. Dec 4, all on Channel 11.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

- Once CBS aired "The Incredible Hulk" with Bill Bixby, we could have expected a "Return of the Incredible Hulk" which airs at 7 p.m. today on Channel 2. It's the story of a man who finds the secret of strength.
- Jackie Gleason returns as Ralph Kramden along with the rest of his old "Honeymooners" cast in a special "Honeymooners Christmas" at 7 p.m. on Channel 7.

Christmas toy ads on TV draw fire from groups

by MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON — Between now and Christmas, children watching television will be barraged by toy commercials.

The exposure will be a major factor in the more than $4.2 billion parents and others playing Santa Claus will spend on toys this year.

Critics of advertising aimed at children have become more vocal recently. One is Mike Pertschuk, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission. Pertschuk says he does not know whether advertising directed at 2, 3 or 4-year-olds, for toys or anything else, ever is appropriate.

VIRGINIA KNAUER, a private consultant to the Toy Manufacturers of America, disagrees. Mrs. Knauer is former consumer adviser to both Presidents Nixon and Ford.

She said she disagrees with those who believe ads aimed at children are deceptive, and who say youngsters aren't equipped to judge as well as their elders.

"I think children are consumers," she said. "When my children were growing up they didn't have television. But I think children are consumers and, as consumers, they need information.

"Television is a fantasitc source of information for kids. They learn a lot about the world out there . . . "

Mrs. Knauer said the toy industry is in a particularly controlled position regarding advertising. She said the industry clears its ads with the National Advertising Review Board before they are shown. The board was established by the Better Business Bureau to prolice the industry.

"ALL I CAN say is, as far as the toy people are concerned, I don't see how they could be more tied in than they are with their advance clearance . . . It would be a disaster in their short selling season if they got on the airwaves with an ad which had to be jerked off, which would be bad publicity.

"I think they lean over, they don't want to deceive, and they want to protect themselves in a highly competitive market."

One public interest group heavily involved in the controversy is Boston-based Action on Children's Television. A researcher there agreed that "some ads are less exploitative than they once were."

But she said several problems still exist with the annual Christmas toy advertising blitz.

" . . . Very often a toy will be advertised as part of several components that have to be bought separately. The Evel Knievel motorcycle currently being advertised is obviously no fun unless you also have the Evel Knievel doll, which the commercial says is sold separately," the researcher said.

"BUT OUR experience and that of most child psychologists is that children don't understand that, because they see both toys in the same ad and assume if they get one they are getting both.

"That's unfair to the child and a little bit to the parent. But that same kind of thing happens again with dolls and so on."

ACT also said a survey two years ago showed it would cost $130 to buy all the toys pictured in one commercial. And it believes toy commercials should be directed at parents, not children.

The group also says some ads use "trick photography" or otherwise present toys in situations not found in real life.

Mrs. Knauer, who has been touring toy factories recently, said she followed toys from the drawing board to model-making and decision-making.

"What impressed me was the obviously vast amounts of money that went into quality control, and also their dedication to making a safe toy. And I've also had the opportunity to watch behind one-way glass the actual testing of children with a toy, unsupervised, playing with it as several children play together with toys at home.

"I've been impressed with this real feeling of working towards safety."

She said the industry is "substantially in compliance" with a voluntary safety standard for toys.

Movie planned on Haitian king during 1800s

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (UPI — The rise and reign of Haiti's black King Henri Christophe, who in the early 1800s built an incredible mountaintop fortress against a French invasion which never came, will be the subject of a movie soon to be shot by a Haitian-American film combine.

The Hallmark International Releasing Group of Miami, Fla., said it wants black actor John Amos to play the title role and is seeking James Coburn, Candice Bergen, Tony Curtis and Diana Ross for other starring roles.

CELEBRATING 20 YEARS in the music business, the O'Jays open Wednesday at Mill Run Theatre, Niles. The trio, known for high energy and cool sounds, appears through Dec. 4.

High Tar No Longer Essential To Taste.

Tests prove low tar MERIT delivers flavor of higher tar cigarettes.

For years, it seemed the only way to get real taste from a cigarette was to smoke a high tar brand.

High tar cigarettes had an "exclusive" on taste.

Today, all the standards are changing because of a new taste breakthrough called 'Enriched Flavor'™ tobacco.

MERIT is packed with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. Tobacco fortified with certain key flavor-rich ingredients isolated in cigarette smoke and proven to deliver flavor way out of proportion to tar.

100's: 12 mg. "tar," 0.9 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Method.

Test Data Conclusive

MERIT and MERIT 100's were both tested against a number of higher tar cigarettes. Thousands of smokers were involved.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of both MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested.

BIG BUSINESS

Foresight, drive helped to get Allen aircraft firm off the ground

Ira Eichner is a no-nonsense businessman who has built up a $100 million a year corporation during the last 25 years.

He began Allen Aircraft Radio after attending Roosevelt University, Chicago, because "I've really always liked aviation, it's an esthetically pleasing industry."

But it also was an industry he saw taking off in the post-World War II travel boom days.

"WE'RE A MOBILE society and if one wanted to get into travel one wouldn't pick the trains or a stage coach company," says the 46-year-old chairman and chief executive officer of the AAR Corp. Elk Grove Village.

Corporate sales are projected to reach $100 million for the fiscal year ending next June 30, and AAR has expanded from the small company Eichner formed to sell used radio and other airplane equipment to a worldwide operation encompassing 19 companies organized into two operating groups.

The corporation's sales figures have topped similar figures for last year in each of the last four quarters, according to a Standard & Poors report on AAR, whose stock is traded on the American Stock Exchange, New York City.

IRA EICHNER

Eichner personally oversees both divisions, often working 16-hour days or getting up at 5 a.m. to pursue an idea or project to help his firm.

ITS A TEAM story, Eichner insists, and most of that team is as young if not younger than Eichner himself.

"We look for young people whose energy levels are compatible with our programs," Eichner says.

It hasn't been all roses for AAR. The firm wrote off a $1.7 million loss in 1975 after an abortive attempt to enter the used aircraft business.

Standard & Poors reports the firm's earnings have remained relatively constant in the last two years despite increased sales, signaling inflation's bite on the corporation's operations.

But such problems do not deter Eichner from projecting more growth for his firm.

"I SEE US becoming one of the truly major corporations in the aviation industry. It's taken us a long time to get from zero to where we are now. We're approaching $100 million. There just aren't that many corporation's around that are that big. And I don't think anybody in the industry really has what we have here," Eichner says

What AAR has in Elk Grove is a 90,000 square-foot warehouse facility stocked with every conceivable jet airplane part from radios to engines.

A Burroughs 1700 system keeps track of inventory stored in 300-foot long and 24-foot high rows. Long-range plans call for allowing airline computers to contact AAR'S computer directly for parts.

"Don't make this look like a big ego trip," Eichner says about his business success. There's no touch of ego visible when Eichner talks about his corporation, only the carefully thought out statements of a man who knows his business.

"WOULD I DO it again? Yeah. Would I have done it differently? I really don't think so. I would have liked to be in the business 25 years sooner when it was really an infant," Eichner says.

"Everybody would like to work hard and as a result achieve success. There are a lot of people who work hard and never achieve success. I have and for that I'm grateful," he says.

"If I had anything to do again, I'd like to find a way to put 30 hours in a 24-hour day," he says.

Case good for stocks over long term

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead

NEW YORK — The case for investing in common stocks remains compelling. Them's fightin' words at a time when the Dow Jones Industrial Average is back to 1964 levels, and down 20 per cent from its peak. Nevertheless, over holding periods of five and 10 years, common stocks generally have returned better profits than money in the bank. Over 15 years and up, stocks are almost always the best choice.

When you review what's happened to your own stocks or mutual funds over the past few years, you probably think only of price. But unless you invested exclusively in companies that scorned dividends, you also should have gotten a reasonable dividend income. Investors often forget to count that segment of their investment returns.

HERE IS long-term average annual stock performance for various holding periods, beginning with 1930. The 25-year holding periods, for example, start with 1930-55, 1931-56, 1932-57 and so on, all the way down to 1951-76. The results shown below assume buying and holding an equal number of shares of all the stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, with dividends reinvested. These are the average annual investment yields you would have received:

• For 25-year holding periods: The most recent showed an average annual return of 10.9 per cent a year. Over-all annual returns ranged from 10 to 17 per cent.

• For 20-year holding periods: The most recent was 9.6 per cent, close to the low rate for that entire time. The high was 19.6 per cent.

• For 15-year holding periods: With only one exception, annual returns ranged from 8 to 22 per cent, mostly clustered in the 11-to-16 per cent area. The most recent was 8.4 per cent.

• For 10-year holding periods: The most recent showed an average annual return of 8.4 per cent, but the two before that were poor. Before the period ending in 1973, returns ranged from 8 to 19 per cent a year, with most in the 11-to-15 per cent area.

• Five-year holding period are more erratic. Returns in the most recent periods ranged from plus to minus 6 per cent a year. In the Depression years, they were as high as 35.6 per cent and as low as -9 (minus nine) per cent. For periods starting in 1940 to 1966, the annual range was 10 to 17 per cent.

LONG-TERM stock yields, in other words, have been excellent, and even short-term yields are good much more often than they're bad. An investor with a range of good stocks or mutual funds should get good results.

There are a couple of flies in this ointment. Over recent periods, you'd have done much better with your money in the bank. This suggests that high-interest bank term accounts remain the best investment for people who can't risk any losses over five or 10 years, for example, if they'll need the money for college tuition.

Also, there was a time when both short and long-term results were pretty bad, namely, the holding periods starting in 1925-29.

If our current investment climate resembles 1925-29, rather than the 47 years since, the message is: Buy bonds, not stocks, at least for the time being. Inflation-adjusted bond yields are now attractive for the first time since the Depression. But for periods of 10 years or more, stocks still have the edge.

)c) 1977, The Washington Post Co.

'78 growth rate to slow: experts

NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's economic growth rate, restrained by high inflation and unemployment, will slow from an estimated 4.8 per cent rise this year to 4.2 per cent in 1978, the Conference Board's economic forum forecast Monday.

The private research organization's forum, composed of 11 leading economists, predicted "balanced, calm, even cyclically apathetic" economic activity next year and ruled out a recession."

The economists projected real Gross National Product will expand by 4.2 per cent to $1.391 billion in 1978, compared with a 4.8 per cent increase this year. Industrial production is expected to show a 5.5 per cent gain, down from 5.9 per cent in 1977.

Inflation and unemployment will ease slightly next pear, the economists concurred, but remain at unhealthy levels.

The forum expects consumer prices to rise by 6.2 per cent next year, down from the 6.5 per cent pace this year. Wholesale prices should climb 6.1 per cent in tandem with the 1977 increase. The economists look for the unemployment rate to average 6.7 per cent next year, down from 7.1 per cent in 1977.

Mrs. Geare retired as women's club editor for the Baltimore News American in 1974, ending a 52-year career in the news business.

When she joined The Evening Sun in 1922, women were an uncommon sight in the news room.

After taking a break from an extended trip around the world, Mrs. Geare returned in 1929 to accept a position as editor of the women's club page at the old Baltimore Post.

The daughter of a suffragette, Mrs. Geare used her newspaper job to further the cause of women's rights.

It was the "Year of the Team" in high school football with Prospect, Elk Grove, Fremd, Barrington and Elgin all qualifying for the coveted state playoffs and St. Viator missing by an eyelash.

Not coincidentally, there was also a bumper crop of outstanding individuals in The Daily Herald area. Talent, experience and character modify this year's 22-man, all-senior squad.

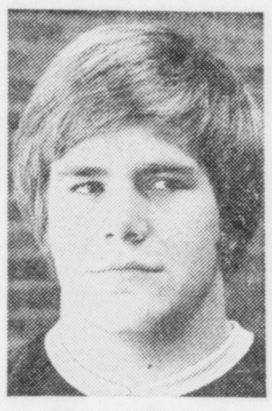

Meet honorary co-captains Paul Izban of Prospect and Bruce Henricksen of Barrington, profiles of the remaining All-Stars and our Special Mention team on Page 5.

Fans give Bears cause—self-respect

Art Mugalian

The ironies of this football season for the Chicago Bears are such that only three weeks ago team members openly were expressing their wish for the remaining scheduled games to be played somehow by proxy.

It seems to have been forgotten in all of the hoopla over a possible NFC division championship that the Bears were at each others' throats not so long ago. The offense was blaming the defense and the defense was blaming itself. Fingers of accusation were being pointed from one linebacker to another and from interior line to the deepest secondary.

The fans, too, were held accountable.

Don Rives' press luncheon explosion and sussequent downfall in the wake of a poorly played game only helps define the situation more clearly. Rives, an erstwhile starter who they now say never was as good as he looked, actually may have given the Bears a flag to rally around. His feud with the fans might have lit a fire that will glow brighter than the Great Chicago Fire and with the same potential for regrowth.

TO THE SO-CALLED layman, nothing would appear more ridiculous than blaming the fans for a team's poor showing. The players are on the field and the fans are in the stands and even the most casual observer can distinguish the difference. Something is drastically wrong when a player or a whole team begins to criticize the public for its performance.

But there is something mythical in the way a crowd reacts to its team, even something psychic in the ebb and flow of emotion that strains the autumn air each Sunday. Perhaps football players understand this feeling more than others — more so than baseball players or golfers or certainly tennis pros. Surely, they understand it better than the fans.

What Rives did, in his crude, sumbitch manner, was something the football fans of Chicago have needed for a long time. Rives mustered up the remnants of his Texas Panhandle heritage and gave Chicago a double-barreled charge of venom, semitough style.

Some of his teammates may have been embarrassed — even offended — when Rives told the fans exactly what he thought of them. But his feelings were their feelings too and it would be difficult to deny those feelings needed to be aired.

If the Bears required a cause to fight for, Rives soon discovered he no longer had a forum on which to fight. His regular job was taken away, almost without explanation, and a rookie wau put in his place. In the classic Greek sense, the messenger with the bad news was banished for speaking the truth. No matter that the truth was unavoidable.

THE BEARS, of course, came within mere seconds of demise. Had they lost the Kansas City game, they would have been out of the title race. They would have lost the opportunity to vindicate themselves.

And the fans would have had something else to boo. It seems inexcusable that a home crowd would openly disparage its team's efforts, poor as they may be, but defeat feeds upon defeat and the fans can lose patience surprisingly fast. And even Don Rives didn't dispute the God-given right of the fans to boo.

In view of what had gone before, however, it would be fair to say that Bears' fans don't deserve what they are getting now. They don't deserve a title chase .they don't deserve Walter Payton. What they deserve is to be forced to sit through a string of 14 straight shutouts in the bitter cold.

What they are getting, instead is a team fighting for its self-respect, trying to prove to a city of strangers that losing is not inherent in the Bears' nature. In a lot of ways, the Bears are seeking to prove to themselves that the fans are wrong.

AT THIS VERY moment, most of the fans have forgotten the recriminations and press tirades of a few weeks ago. Rives was right; the fans are fair-weather. It didn't take a good ol' boy to figure that out.

But where do we stand now? What happens if the Bears win their division? What will happen if they go on to win the Super Bowl, of all things?

It would take unbridled nerve for Rives to say I Told You So. But I Told You So would have to be on the Bears' collective minds.

Right now they must be playing with one thought as their constant companion: if we win this thing, we're going to take that trophy and stick it right down Chicago's throat.

It may not be the nice thing to do or the proper thing to do. But, Chicago, we sure would have earned it.

Vikings 'snow' Packers

–Complete NFL report on Page 2

Vikings keeps Bears 1 game back

The Minnesota Vikings dealt the Chicago Bears' playoff hopes a blow as severe as the weather in Green Bay Sunday when they rallied to beat the Packers 13-6 in the snow at Lambeau Field.

The decision pulls the Vikes a full game ahead of the Bears — winners at Detroit, 31-14, Thursday — in the NFC Central race. With just three weeks of the regular season remaining, only a minor miracle will give Chicago a shot at the playoffs.

The Bears have Tampa Bay, Green Bay and the New York Giants remaining on the schedule while the Vikings play San Francisco, Oakland and Detroit.

In other NFL games Sunday Denver crunched Baltimore 27-13, Dallas stopped Washington 14-7, San Diego nipped Seattle 30-28, San Francisco stopped New Orleans 20-17, Atlanta blanked Tampa Bay 17-0, Pittsburgh edged the New York Jets 23-20, Cincinnati outdistanced the New York Giants 30-13, New England toppled Philadelphia 14-6, Los Angeles shut down Cleveland 9-0 and Houston ripped Kansas City 34-20.

Bob Lee hit Sammy White with a 40-yard scoring pass and veteran Fred Cox kicked two field goals to lift the Vikings past Green Bay.

The snow, which started falling early in the day, fell to a depth of about six inches before the game ended. The slippery conditions contributed to the game's first three scores.

The Vikings' Brent McClanahan fumbled early in the game and Packers' end Bob Barber recovered on the Green Bay 21. Four plays later, rookie quarterback David Whitehurst rolled five yards around left end and skidded into the end zone.

Craig Morton passed for two touchdowns and ran for another while linebacker Tom Jackson returned an intercepted Bert Jones pass 73 yards for a score to lead the Broncos to victory over Colts.

The triumph gave the Broncos a 10-1 record — best in the NFL — and helped them maintain first place in the AFC West by one game over Oakland. Denver and Baltimore went into Sunday's game as the only 9-1 clubs in the league.

Louis Wright set up Denver's final touchdown, dashing 59 yards in the wanning moments of the game to set up a Morton 7-yard TD run on a bootleg.

Roger Staubach picked up a crucial first down on a fourth down quarterback sneak which set up Tony Dorsett's 1-yard touchdown run on the next play and lifted the Cowboys over Washington Redskins.

Dorsett's score came with 10:08 left and capped a 14-point second half rally by Dallas, which broke a two-game losing streak and raised the Cowboys' record to 9-2. Staubach hit Golden Richards with a 4-yard TD pass early in the third quarter and Efren Herrera kicked both conversions.

Rolf Benirschke kicked field goals of 40, 26 and 39 yards while San Diego's offense controlled the ball for the final seven minutes to overcome four touchdown passes by Seattle's Jim Zorn and preserve a 30-28 victory.

San Diego jumped off a 13-0 lead on Rickey Young's 1-yard touchdown run and Benirschke's first two field goals.

RAY WERSCHING kicked a 42-yard field goal on the final play to give the 49ers a victory over the Saints.

It was Werching's second field goal and came after the 49ers got a big break on a penalty at the New Orleans' 29.

New Orleans' Ernie Jackson intercepted a pass by Jim Plunkett at the 16 to seemingly break up San Francisco's drive to a last-minute score. But defensive tackle Mike Fultz was charged with a roughing-the-passer penalty to give San Francisco a first down at the 29 with 36 seconds left.

DAN PASTORINI'S three scoring passes and two touchdown runs by Tim Wilson lifted Houston to a 34-20 victory over the Chiefs and kept the Oilers' alive in the tight AFC Central division race.

The victory upped Houston's record to 6-5, one game behind division leader Pittsburgh but tied for second with Cleveland and Cincinnati.

Pastorini threw a 48-yard touchdown pass to Ken Burrough on the Oilers' first offensive play and he added scoring throws of seven yards to Burrough and three yards to running back Don Hardeman to put the game away in the fourth quarter.

JOHN CAPPELLETTI ran for a touchdown, Rafael Septien added a field goal and the Los Angeles Rams' defense collected its third shutout of the season in blanking the Browns.

Quarterback Pat Haden engineered two long first-half scoring drives and then directed a ball-control offense in the second half, enabling the Rams to gain their fourth straight triumph. Los Angeles recovered two Browns' fumbles and intercepted for passes.

STEVE GROGAN threw for two first-half touchdowns, one of 64 yards to rookie Stanley Morgan, and the New England defense recorded eight quarterback sacks in steering the Patriots to victory over the Eagles.

Grogan also tossed a 16-yard scoring pass to Darryl Stingley as the Patriots kept thier playoff chances alive by raising their record to 7-4.

Haskel Stanback scored a pair of one-yard touchdowns and Fred Steinfort kicked a 26-yard field goal enabling Atlanta to keep its slim playoff hopes alive at the expense of winless Tampa Bay.

Atlanta, the stingiest defensive team in the NFL, kept Tampa Bay pinned inside its own territory most of the game, intercepted four passes and recovered one Buc fumble.

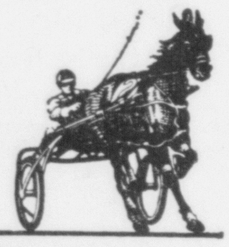

TERRY BRADSHAW threw two touchdown passes and Franco Harris blasted across from the one for the go-ahead touchdown that gave Pittsburgh victory over the Jets and enabled the Steelers to take over undisputed possession of first place in the AFC Central Division.

Ken Anderson fired first-half touchdown passes of 58, 30 and 47 yard to pace the Bengals to an easy 30-13 victory over the Giants in a snowstorm.

Anderson teamed with Billy Brooks on 58-and 30-yard TD tosses in the first quarter and then combined with rookie Jim Corbett on a 47-yard scoring pass in the second period.

No. 20 may be nightmare for Irish

In the next few weeks, snoozing Notre Dame defensive players may share the same nightmarish vision of a fleet No. 20 darting and twisting his way to a dazzling Cotton Bowl performance.

Texas A&M defenders can provide any details their Notre Dame counterparts leave out.

Texas fullback Earl Campbell's awesome running display Saturday led the top-ranked Longhorns to a smashing 57-28 victory over Texas A&M and into a Cotton Bowl duel against fifth-rated Notre Dame Jan. 2.

WITH TEXAS A&M defenders keying on him all day, the shifty, bruising senior scored four touchdowns, gained 221 yards and blunted a would-be Aggie rally to keep Texas the only undefeated team in the nation and clinch a Southwest Conference championship.

"This is the way I would like for it to have ended," said Campbell, who wrapped up the NCAA rushing championship with 1,743 yards — the first SWC player ever to win the title.

Campbell's performance capped an amazing debut season for Texas' new coach, Fred Akers. The Longhorns had gone 5-5-1 in 1976 and were an also-ran pick for 1977.

"I have so many feelings about this team," Akers said. "They are a fine bunch of young men. They have overcome situations like losing three quarterbacks and the top kicker in the country (Russell Erxleben missed the Aggie game with a pulled thigh muscle).

"BUT THEY didn't complain. Somebody stood up and said, I can kick, or I can pass, and we just went on."

Campbell's scoring bursts of 6 and 23 yards in the third and fourth quarters finally subdued the stubborn Aggies, who had battled back from a 26-point defiict to make a game of it.

Akers said he believed the 6-foot-1, 200-pound Campbell deserves the Heisman Trophy.

"I think he is the finest football player in the country," Akers said. "And I don't know how we're going to replace him."

Akers praised senior quarterback Randy McEachern, who took over as the Longhorns' starting quarterback during the Oklahoma game when injuries sidelined Texas' top two quarterbacks.

"Randy has gained confidence and everyone has gained confidence with him," Akers said. McEachern completed 6 of 13 passes for 172 yards and four touchdowns against A&M.

CAMPBELL AND the Longhorns made believers out of the Aggies.

"All-Around," said A&M linebacker Kevin Monk, "it was the best offense we've seen. Earl Campbell does everything so well. He runs with reckless abandon. He's definitely the No. 1 candidate for the Heisman."

Elsewhere in the Top 20 Saturday, third-ranked Alabama humbled state rival Auburn 48-21 and eighth-rated Penn State edged No. 9 Pittsburgh 15-13.

Thursday, Arkansas nipped Texas Tech 17-14 and Friday, Oklahoma whipped Nebraska 38-7 for a berth in the Orange Bowl against Arkansas and Southern Cal knocked UCLA out of the Rose Bowl with a stunning 29-27 victory on a last-second field goal.

QUARTERBACK JEFF Rutledge passed for two touchdowns and halfback Tony Nathan scored on two short runs to lead Alabama to its easy victory. Rutledge, who picked up 295 yards passing and rushing, threw 30 yards to split end Bruce Bolton for one touchdown and 42 yards to Ozzie Newsome for another. Alabama, bound for the Sugar Bowl as the Southeastern Conference champion against Ohio State, finished with a 10-1 record.

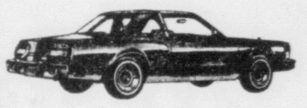

Penn State scored a hard-fought victory over the arch-rival Pittsburgh Panthers, but it took a jarring tackle by Nittany Lions' defensive tackle Matt Millen on Pitt star running back Elliott Walker to prevent the Panthers from pulling out a 15-15 tie in the final seconds on a two-point conversion.

After a dramatic four-play, 52-yard TD drive, capped by Matt Cavanaugh's 17-yard scoring pass to Gordon Jones, Pittsburgh sent Walker over left tackle but he was stopped inches short.

"I've been coming to Pitt Stadium for 28 years," Penn State Coach Joe Paterno said, "and this win could be the sweetest ever for me here."

Cold couldn't dampen fans' football enthusiasm

by KEITH REINHARD

NORMAL—In parkas, ski masks and snowmobile suits, they funneled into Mecca.

Wearing furry mittens, lugging blankets and sporting bright colored hats with such far-away names as Cogs and Maple Leafs and Purple Riders, they trucked and bused into Normal over the weekend in a sacrifice of their creature comforts.

They came and they went. Few were brave enough to expose themselves to this type of climatic brutality for more than one session. Indeed, there often were times when the concession area beneath the west stands of frozen Hancock Stadium here contained more chilly bodies than the bleachers themselves.

BUT THE enthusiams and emotion never waned. Through two Arctic-like days and five championship football games, perhaps 10,000 persons took turns submitting themselves to the rather torturous ordeal of rooting and cheering . . . and crying . . . as their dedicated sons fought for a state championship trophy.

No matter that all the games but one weren't even close, that four of the five contests ended in shutouts and the sting of leather against numbed fingertips prompted more fumbles and interceptions than most entire conferences would see in a season.

Even the icy wind gusts cascading across the field and dropping the wind chill factor below the zero mark were no deterrent to the sky-high spirits. Friday afternoon when the sympathetic announcer told Stockton fans that they could move from the unprotected bleachers in the face of the wind on the far side of the field to the main grandstand, the response was a universal thumbs down.

These fans would no more consider deserting the equally frozen team on the sidelines just below them than they would consider losing.

FOR AT LEAST one individual, however, the extreme cold was of no concern. East Leyden's retiring coach Jack Leese said after his 8-0 triumph over Deerfield in the Class 5A finale: "Cold? What cold? There was a heat wave out there tonight. If you don't believe me, ask any of my players."

Leese, who reputedly wore the same tie on the sidelines for 15 years while compiling a 98-29-4 record, said his team had prepared for the frigid confrontation. "We practiced yesterday for two hours in Chicago and it was cold there. It's hot down here."

If anyone needed more convincing, they might have taken note of the fact that his Eagles also practiced out in the cold just before the title game at a high school field across from the stadium.

The Leyden win was their eighth shutout of the season, allowing them to close with a 12-0 record while spoiling Deerfield's bid for a second crown in three years. Warrior coach Paul Adams said of the game: "We had our chances to capitalize early and didn't. When that happens you're supposed to lose."

ADAMS WENT ON to praise Leyden's quickness off the ball, their great lateral pursuit and their fullback Jim Benedetto who accounted for all of the game's scoring at the end of the third quarter in the midst of a 114-yard rushing performance.

"Sure I'm disappointed," Adams said. "But what the heck, if you won them all, it would take all the fun out of it."

If the impressive showing of Leese was overshadowed at all, it was by coach Gordon Gillespie, who increased his own 26-year record to 138-41-8 by directing Joliet Catholic to an unprecedented third straight 4A title, 30-6, over LaSalle Peru.

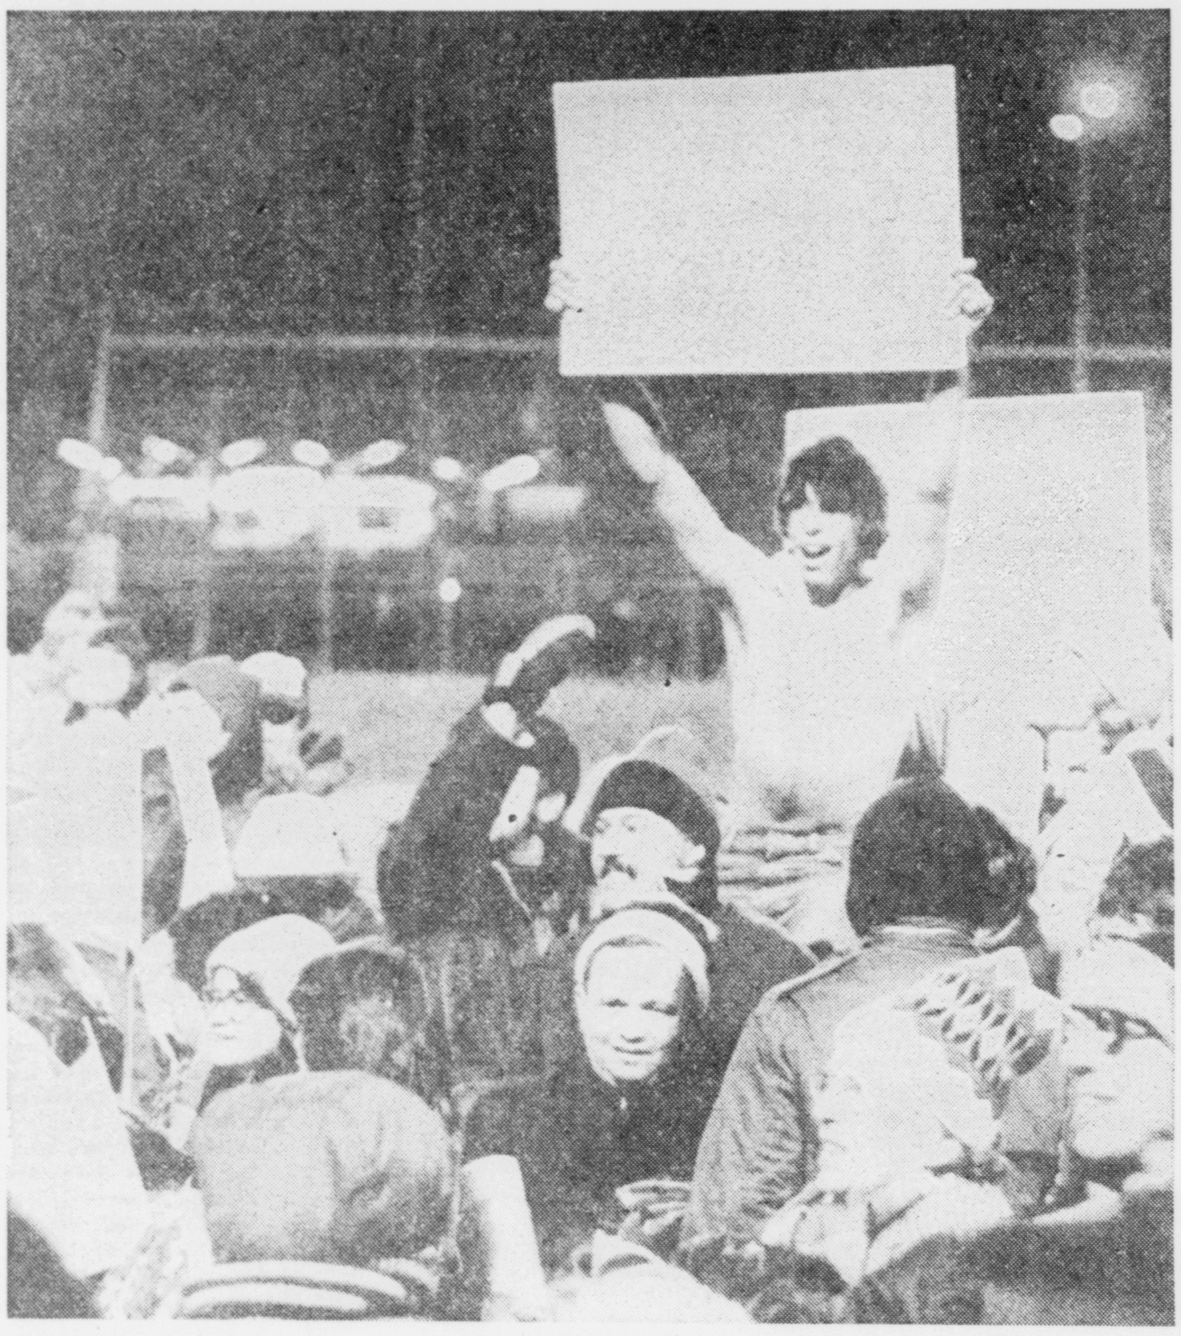

Gillespie, who strongly advocates a two-platoon system, literally wore the Cavaliers down after a 6-6 halftime deadlock.

LEESE, HOWEVER, showed little sign of wear as he joked with reporters at the conclusion of the 1977 championship series. He said his retirement is more of a trial separation, a period of hibernation and that the door has been left open for a return.

"Actually, I'm planning on going into the same act next year," he laughed.

As for the decrepit, thin black tie, "I'm planning on having it bronzed," Leese said.

A more useful end might be to burn it, only for the warmth that the football tournament did not provide.

NORMAL? Nothing's normal about winning a state football championship in the city going by that name where the playoffs were conducted over the weekend. East Leyden student Don Ellinger tends to overdo normalacy however by stripping to the waist in the 18 degree weather after his Eagles topped Deerfield 8-0 for the 5-A title.

Meadows, Barrington capture tourneys

Bill Weinberg, the Rolling Meadows basketball coach, found himself with a challenge Saturday night. How do you get a team mentally prepared to play a tournament game when first place has already been decided?

Weinberg's Mustangs clinched the title in the Niles North Tournament when they defeated the host team, 67-63, Friday night. The contest with Maine North Saturday night could only help boost the season record, which it did when Rolling Meadows came up with a 64-61 victory.

The Mustangs fell behind 34-28 at the half, convincing Weinberg to make a defensive change.

"WE WENT into a straight man-to-man defense," Weinberg said. "I told the players they'd have to do it themselves, and they played a heckuva second half."

Greg Adams led the defensive attack after the intermission. Weinberg said Adams provided the turning point by spreading out the Maine North offense.

On the Mustang offensive end of the floor, Tom Hopkins made 16 of his 18 points in the second half while Glenn Brettner contributed 14 for the game. Kent Walker was the Mustangs' leading scorer with 19 points as they pushed their record to 3-1.

Walker broke his own school scoring mark against Niles North Friday night when he scored 36 with 15 field goals, another Mustang high. Brettner chipped in 11 points. Six straight field goals by Walker gave the lead to the Mustangs for good in the final quarter.

Waler finished the three-game, round-robin tourney with 87 points and was voted as the most valuable player. Hopkins also made the all-tourney team.

KNIGHTS BEAT WARRIORS

A variety of defenses and a balanced scoring attack gave the Prospect Knights a 71-59 victory against the Maine West Warriors in the Thanksgiving Holiday Basketball Tournament at Maine South High School in Park Ridge Saturday evening.

Shifting between a 3-2 and 1-3-1 zone defenses, the Knights limited the Warriors to only eight, first-period points and 16, second period points while scoring 17 and 16 respective points themselves for a 33-24 Prospect halftime lead.

THE KNIGHTS put the clamps upon the high scoring Maine West guard duo of Mike Clark and Tim Logisz. Clark scored two points and Logisz 20, but 14 came in the fourth period when game was all but over.

Final scoring totals showed Logisz leading all scorers. No other Warrior hit for double figures.

Prospect's attack displayed Jim Apuzzo and Paul Lundstedt with 19 points each while teammate Dave LaCosse contributed 14.

Even though Prospect and Maine South were both 2-1 in the tournament, South was declared the tournament titlist, because it beat Prospect 75-54 Wednesday night and defeated New Trier East 94-63 Saturday evening.

WILDCATS DROP 2

Early turnovers marred Wheeling's efforts at the Batavia holiday basketball tourney and the Wildcats went on to drop decisions to Proviso West and the host Bulldogs Saturday.

Batavia felled the 'Cats 71-58 after jumping into a quick 22-10 first quarter lead. "Their press bothered us early, we made some mistakes and weren't able to get back in to the game," Wheeling coach Ted Ecker said.

Dan Larson paced Wilcat scoring with 12 while Jim Sabal added 11, Mark Begrowicz 9, and Jim Lockafeer, who later was named to the all-tourney team, had 8.

PROVISO WEST bettered Wheeling 61-44 behind the efforts of guard Chris Fisher, the tournament's most valuable player.

Fisher contributed 12 first half points and engineered several steals to help the Panthers break loose in the second quarter. Wheeling trailed by only three after the first period but were down 30-17 at halftime.

"Except for one second quarter spurt, we played them pretty even," Ecker said.

The Cougars owned a one-point lead when Lake Forest hit on a shot with just two seconds left before halftime. Conant rallied again early in the third period but Brad Goodman went to the bench in foul trouble and the Scouts capitalized on his absence by pulling back ahead permanently.

Mike Pritchett joined teammate Severson in double figures with a 14-point performance.

Clients entranced with CLINICAL HYPNOSIS™

HYPNOTHERAPY

Ann Baker slipped off her sandals. Smiling, she settled back in the reclining chair and closed her eyes.

She was already 36 pounds lighter than the first day she visited the sunny, plant-filled room seven weeks ago.

In a waiting room outside, Greg Loesch and Jean Manella swapped stories about how great it is to be free of the urge to light one cigarette after another.

Since Bey opened his clinical hypnosis office in Schaumburg 10 months ago, he said he's had a high degree of success with weight loss clients. But his work is not limited to weight control.

Bey's clients range from persons having marital or sexual problems to students who want to improve their grades to those who want to do a better job at work.

He boasts of quick accomplishments with people like Loesch and Mrs. Manella who conquered their smoking habit in less than five days of treatment.

When Loesch came to Bey in January he was smoking more than two packs a day.

"I never touched a cigarette after the first session and by the end of the third day I had absolutely lost all desire to smoke," he said.

Loesch said he believes Bey's smoking program is well worth the money.

Ironically, it was Mrs. Manella's dentist who referred her to Bey "because he kept complaining about how horribly dirty my teeth were from the tobacco.

Loesch, Mrs. Manella and Mrs. Baker describe the state of trance as a floating, light feeling. They awake totally rested. To Loesch it is "feeling that I am in and out of contact with the world at the same time." In fact hypnosis worked so well that Mrs. Manella was able to have a tooth extracted without anesthetic.

But Mrs. Baker admits she was skeptical. "The first time I wasn't positive I had been under because I wasn't stretched out stiff between two chairs," she said.

Bey said he believes anyone can be hypnotized, but some subjects are "easier" than others.

"A person has to have the desire to do something against his own will while hypnotized.

"Hypnotists are not unscrupulous people who make others their complete slaves while in a trance," he said.

And weight loss clients' physical conditions are "checked out" with their physicians before Bey will begin treatment.

"I have had the experience of some very surprised doctors contacting me when their patients have come in for a checkup minus 30 or so pounds," he said.

Former Net player Bob Elmore dead

ROME — Rome's Lazio-Eldorado basketball team observed a minute of silent prayer before its game against Pintinox Sunday in memory of Bob Elmore, its star center who died from what doctors say was an apparent overdose of heroin. Elmore's body was found sitting in a chair of his luxury apartment in the early morning hours Saturday. Police said they found a syringe and packets of heroin and hashish, a heroin cooker and a hash pipe on a nearby table.

Officials planned an autopsy Monday but doctors said they had little doubt Elmore's death came almost immediately after a massive overdose of heroin. They said needle marks were clearly visible on his left arm. Elmore, 23 and a native of New York City, arrived in Italy last month to play for Eldorado after the New Jersey Nets of the National Basketball Association let their option on him lapse just before the season began.

The 6-9 player had starred at Wichita State and his dream was to play with the Nets near his hometown.

Madden hints that Stabler to start

OAKLAND — John Madden all but confirmed Sunday that quarterback Ken Stabler, the man who makes the Oakland offense go, will be in the starting lineup tonight when the world champion Raiders host the sinking Buffalo Bills.

Madden said he won't make up his mind about Stabler, who injured his knee in the first quarter last Sunday against San Diego, until game time, which is 8 p.m. for the nationally televised matchup with the 2-8 Bills.

The Raiders are fighting for their playoff lives with an 8-2 record which includes losses to the Denver Broncos and the Chargers. Mike Rae took over for Stabler last Sunday and the Raiders eventually lost to San Diego, 12-7, generating a total offense of only 140 yards.

"Stabler will start if he is able to play," said Madden. "And when I say able to play I mean just that. If he still hurts and his mobility is impaired, he won't start. I have a world of confidence in Mike Rae and I'm sure he can do the job, especially after he's had a whole week to work with the team. Still, if Kenny can play, I want him to start."

Shearer, Ballesteros win in golf

MELBOURNE, Australia — Bob Shearer of Australia birded the last two holes Sunday to finish with a par 72 and a four day total of 7-under 281 to win the $165,000 Champion of Champions Golf Tournament by one stroke over four other players. Soaked to the skin by a day-long rain, the 29-year-old local hero holed a putt from 12 feet for a birdie on the 17th and knocked in a 10-footer for another birdie on the final hole. Sharing second spot with 282 were Britain's Maurice Bembridge, Australian Jack Newton, and Americans Curtis Strange and John Benda.

In Miyazaki, Japan, Severiano Ballesteros of Spain fired a 1-under-par 71 Sunday to win the $250,000 Phoenix Golf Tournament with a four-round total of 6-under par 282. Ballesteros, 29, who started the final round with a three-stroke lead, finished one stroke in front of Norio Arai of Japan to pick up the first prize of $50,000.

Alouettes romp to Grey Cup triumph

MONTREAL — Sonny Wade threw three touchdown passes and Don Sweet kicked a record six field goals and also set a scoring record as the Montreal Alouettes won their fourth Grey Cup Sunday with a convincing 41-6 victory over the Edmont'n Eskimos.

A record Grey Cup crowd of 68,205 at the Olympic Stadium sat through freezing temperatures to see the East-West classic played on a field partially convered by ice, a result of Saturday's nine-inch snowfall. The Alouettes' defense also shone by intercepting Eskimo quarterback Bruce Lemerman four times and recovering four Edmonton fumbles.

Dicky Harris got Montreal started in the first quarter with an interception that set up Sweet's first field goal from 17 yards. Sweet, who was selected as the Canadian player of the game, also kicked two singles and three converts, giving him 45 career points in Grey Cup competition, also a record.

Conant tough on Niles East mats

Conant, behind the championship performances of Jim Nakashian, Jon Gluck and Keith Ryan, charged to a second place finish at the 16-team Trojan Invitational wrestling tourney at Niles East Saturday.

The Cougars rang up 106½ points, to nip East Leyden by two for the runnerup slot. Maine East meanwhile scored 125 to easily outdistance the rest of the field.

Buffalo Grove finished sixth at 68½, Arlington was 10th at 59½ and Rolling Meadows placed 14th with 31 points.

GLUCK, at 119 pounds, tangled with another 1977 downstate performer, Paul Preissing of Arlington, in the title bout and nailed the Cardinal standout with his second setback of the young season on a takedown in the last 20 seconds of action.

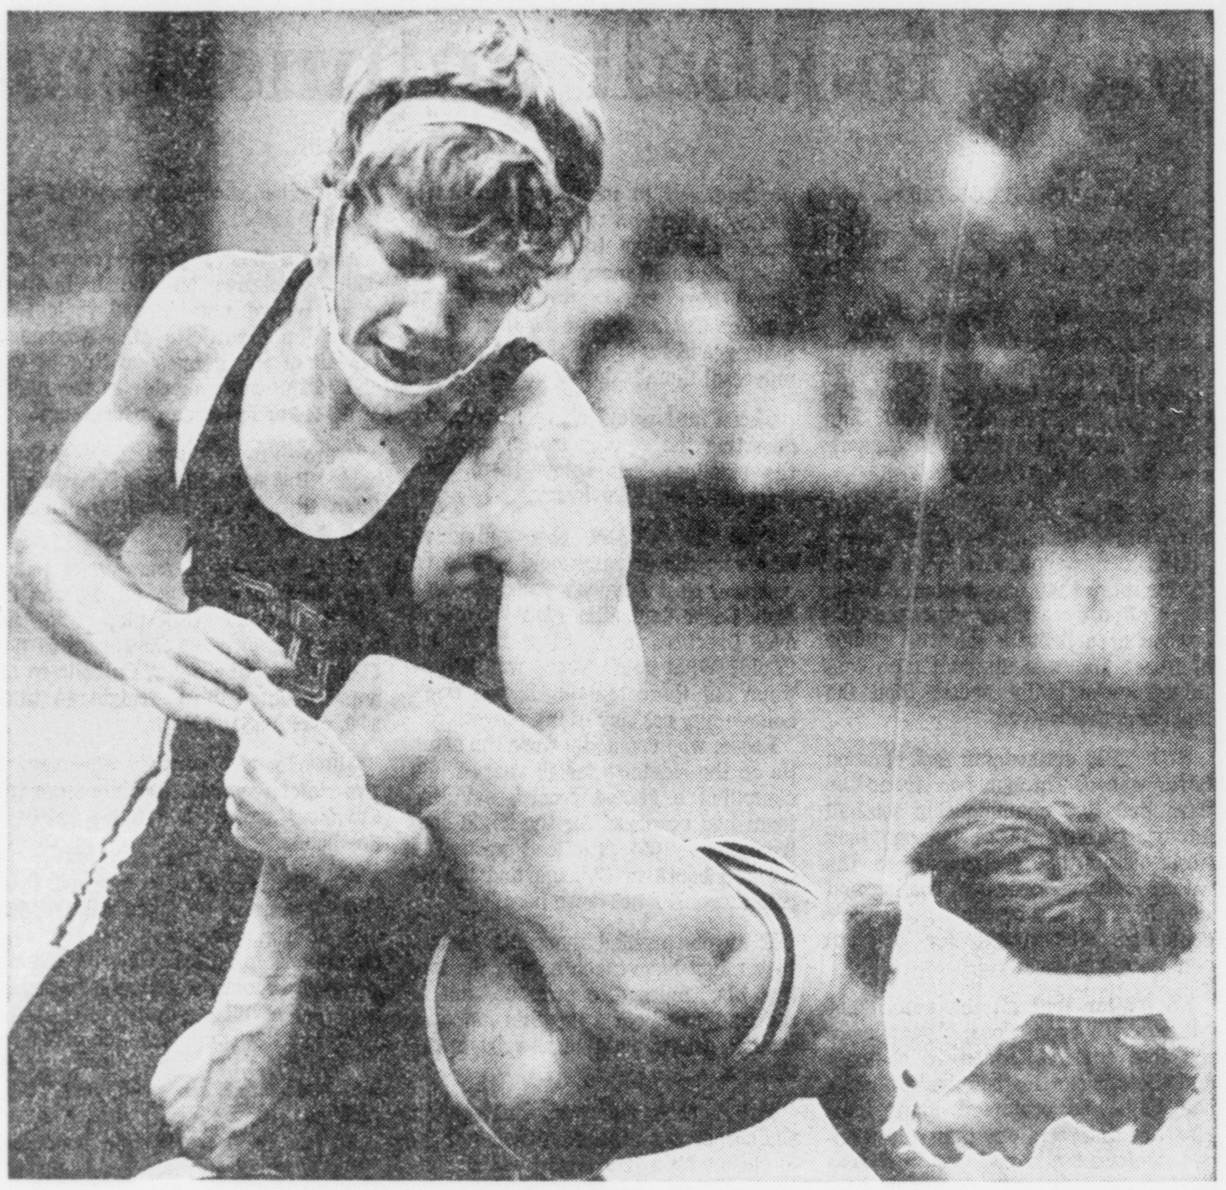

Nakashian outmuscled Bill Stein of Niles East 12-4 to win the 105-pound crown while Ryan annexed 155-pound honors by sticking Mark McGrane of Maine East at 4:57.

Cougar coach Jim Cartwright had five other place earners as well, Maft Bello taking third at 185, Jack Kerr notching a fourth in the heavyweight division, Tom Prather snaring fourth at 98, Ron Griffen placing fifth at 167 and Mike Ford collecting a fifth at 155.

The only other area champion crowned at Niles East was Bison Mark Teutsch. He capped his 167 pound display with a 3-1 title win over Patt Potts of New Trier East.

BUFFALO GROVE'S Dave Millay (132), Mustang Bill Chauncey (heavyweight) and Redbirds Gene Holmquist (145) and Dave Shoemaker (155) were other third place finishers. Arlington's Andy Dickerson (112) and Bison Bill Hayes (133) and Ken Bartelt (185) all finished fourth.

The hosting Trojans (87½ points) and Glenbrook North (73½) were the other teams winding up ahead of Buffalo Grove. Granite City North rounded out the top eight just ahead of Arlington with 63 points.

Meet the offense

JIM MEYER — Elk Grove. Versatile is the word to describe this 190-pound senior. In his two years as a varsity starter, Meyer started as a halfback on offense and in the secondary on defense. He also ran back kickoffs and returned punts. This season Meyer led the Mid-Suburban League in scoring with eight touchdowns for 48 points. One of those touchdowns was an electrifying 100-yard kickoff return. Against St. Laurence in the playoffs, Meyer scored on a 69-yard run.

BOB ASLAN — Maine West. Injuries kept this senior running back from playing the last games of the 1977 season. In seven games, however, he rushed for 575 yards in 110 attempts. Aslan also tallied five touchdowns and four extra points. Three of those touchdowns came against Waukegan East, including a 54-yard run. "He's a good student and a team leader," said Maine West coach Dan Mortier. "I wish I could say that I've taught him to be a top-notch ball carrier, but his kind of talent is difficult to teach — it's very natural."

KEVIN WEAVER — Fremd. Weaver is well known to followers of the Mid-Suburban League this season. The senior running back also is well known to the conference defensive units that chased him 1,081 yards in his 216 carries this season. The mark led the MSL in rushing and set a school record. The 5-foot-10, 180-pound senior also ranked first on his team in points scored with 48 and third in receiving with six catches for 61 yards. "He had a super season," his coach Joe Samojedny said. "He holds just about every rushing record at school."

BILL CHAUNCEY — Rolling Meadows. Coach Art Klein showed confidence in this 6-foot-5, 261-pound senior tackle by using him on both sides of the Mustang line. "We ran behind him a lot," Klein said. "He was a good blocker, an excellent trapper, showed good mobility and was strong." There is not too much more to be said for an offensive lineman. Chauncey started two years for the Mustangs, and showed great improvement between his junior and senior seasons.

BARNEY SPATES — Elgin. His quickness was unbelievable, his balance uncanny, and his break-away strength just remarkable. Spates used every characteristic to rank as the area's leading rusher with 1,149 yards. The 5-foot-9, 185 pound senior halfback finished with a 6.2 yards per carry while scoring 11 touchdowns. Spates was the leading Maroon scorer with 74 points. "Barney is one of the most personable kids I've coached, head coach Dick Stephens said. "His attitude is great and when he gets loose, he's just fantastic to watch."

ERIC SHELLENBACK — Barrington. Fast (4.4 in the 40) and nimble-footed, Shellenback became the Broncos' all-time pass receiver with a total of 85 catches for his two-year varsity career. He smashed the single-season school record in 1977 with 51 grabs for 648 yards and six touchdowns. Shellenback also was his team's punter and kick returner and, in addition, rushed for 148 yards from scrimmage. "How can you defend him when you can't catch him?" one opposing coach marveled. Incredibly, the rap against Shellenback is that he has "only average hands."

TOM MUNRO — Elk Grove. If you wanted a prototype for a high school lineman, it would be Tom Munro. Just listen to Elk Grove coach Don Schnake talk about his 211-pound senior: "His range and his size and his speed and his quickness and a nose for the lead made him outstanding. He will not only cover the width of the field, but he's a good hitter when he gets there." The 1977 season was the second consecutive year Munro started both ways for the Grenadiers, playing offensive tackle and defensive linebacker.

JOHN COMERFORD — Palatine. The 6-foot, 180-pound senior was the chief offensive threat for Palatine this season, grabbing 30 passes for 441 yards and a touchdown. Comerford's spectacular diving TD catch against Arlington provided the game-winner in that rivalry while his three catches for 43 yards helped the Pirates beat Buffalo Grove for the first time ever. In two seasons, Comerford caught 49 passes for more than 650 yards on a team not known for its offensive explosiveness.

DAVID HERSEY — Elgin. This two-year letterman was one of the area's outstanding receivers with 30 catches for 618 yards and four touchdowns. On defense, Hersey led the Maroons with five interceptions from his safety position. "David's great desire to win was just unreal," coach Dick Stephens said. "He would never quit." The 6-foot-3, 205-pound end best exemplified that spirit by returning punts, two for touchdowns, and acting as the kicker on speciality teams. Hersey was also one of three captains on the Elgin squad.

JOHN JOSTEN — St. Viator. This senior leader of the St. Viator offense got his start as a quarterback under fire as a sophomore, when an injury elevated him from the sophomore team to the varsity just in time for the state playoffs. The Lions lost that thriller, but since then Josten has led his team to a 15-4 record. Josten, 6-foot, 185 pounds, led the area in total yardage with 1,285, 502 rushing and 783 yards passing. He completed 52 of 117 passes for 10 touchdowns and also played on defense where he had six interceptions and averaged five solo tackles and six assists per game as a safety.

Prospect's Izban gives '100%' try

by KEITH REINHARD

The inclination after watching Paul Izban do his thing on the football field is to say, "Now there's a good one . . . a real natural."

Inaccurate on both counts.

For the second year in a row, this stellar Prospect linebacker has been selected to The Daily Herald All-Area football team. And for 1977, he has been selected as defensive captain of the prestigious 22-man outfit.

"If there's anything natural about Paul," his coach Gary Grouwinkel said, "it's a fierce, competitive desire . . . he never puts in less than 100 per cent effort and he never goes into a game expecting anything less than a win.

"As for being a natural though, Paul is where he is because he worked hard at it," Grouwinkel siad. He's a solid physical specimen now, but there was a lot of sweat left back in the training room and on the field to achieve that stature."

However the 6-foot-2, 205-pound senior acquired it, he has worn it well this past season, leading a relatively young Knight team into the Class 5A playoffs for the first time. He also is spearheading a defense that was the backbone of the team's impressive 8-2 final record.

PROSPECT finished second in defense among the 14-team Mid-Suburban circuit and the Knight passing yardage yield for 1977 (a 44.6 average) ranks as the 9th best in the 15-year history of the circuit.

Prospect also had only one touchdown registered against them via passing all season. That touchdown was by Deerfield in a 9-0 verdict, the closest anyone came to the Warriors in the whole playoff series leading to the state finals.

Individually, Izban has been just as effective. During the nine-game regular season he was involved in 137 tackles, 77 of them unassisted, blocked four punts, registered eight interceptions and fumble recoveries, and prompted six other turnovers.

HE ALSO scored one touchdown on defense and even was used on offense as a blocking back on short yardage situations. Izban did some of Prospect's kicking as well.

"Paul's just a super kid," Grouwinkel said. "He was the captain of our team, the leader in our conditioning program. He wasn't a big talker but a quiet influence on our entire program and a true example of what hard work and dedication can achieve."

So that "good football player" analysis is false. Paul Izban has turned out to be an outstanding one.

Meet the defense

JEFF STARKE — Wheeling. One of the chief reasons behind the big Wildcat turnabout in 1977, this hard-nosed senior was in on virtually all of the action during a 6-3 campaign. As a linebacker on defense he notched 31 unassisted tackles and helped on 50 more while recovering three fumbles and forcing five enemy miscues. On offense the 200-pound, 6-foot veteran was effective both as a blocking back and running with the ball, finishing seventh in the conference in rushing with 554 yards. In two full seasons he carried for nearly 1,000 yards. Said his coach Gerry Clinnin: "One of the finest all-round athletes I've ever worked with."

MEL COLE — Elgin. A three-year varsity starter and twice captain of the Maroons, Cole led his team to a 10-1 record and a quarterfinal berth in the state playoffs. A 6-foot-2, 215-pound senior tackle, Cole played offense and defense and led Elgin with 158 tackles. "Mel has never missed a game or practice. He's always there and is like a coach on the field," head coach Dick Stephens said. Cole was chosen to the Upstate Eight all-conference team and was listed as an All-America candidate in a vgeseason poll by National Prep Sports magazine.

DAN BUCARO — St. Viator. An injury ended this fine receiver's career three games early this season, but this St. Viator senior is still rated one of the premier players in The Daily Herald area. A two-year starter for the Lions, Bucaro caught 11 passes for 175 yards this year, scoring three touchdowns. He also was a leader on defense for the Lions, who finished 8-1 this season. Bucaro also played safety on defense and led the team in tackles.

JEFF CORRADO — Rolling Meadows. Corrado provided the Mustangs with mobility on defense. The 6-foot-2, 200-pound senior played three positions during his two-year starting stint with Rolling Meadows. He started as a safety, moved to the "Monster" spot and played his last three games at linebacker. During that time, he set school records for tackles in a game (25 against Forest View) and tackles in a season (130, including 85 solos) as a senior. "He was a smart player, who was strong and fast, too," said Art Klein, Rolling Meadows coach.

JOHN LOPEZ — St. Viator. This senior tight end for St. Viator also played cornerback on defense for the 8-1 Lions. Though he wasn't thrown a pass in four games, he still caught 19 for 346 yards and five touchdowns. His best day was a five-catch day for 154 yards and three touchdowns. The 6-foot-2, 185-pound Lopez also has tremendous speed and is considered a major college prospect. He runs the 40 yard dash in 4.6 seconds.

ROCKY PUGLIESE — Conant. This Conant senior may have been named to the defensive All-Area unit, but he could just as easily have been named to the offensive unit as well. A two-way player, Pugliese made the transition from running back to quarterback this season and quickly became a leader as the Cougars enjoyed their best season since 1969, posting a 6-3 record. In addition to playing in the defensive backfield, Pugliese completed 31 of 46 passes for 478 yards and six touchdowns. An excellent runner, Rocky carried the ball 93 times, gaining 280 yards.

PAUL PASSAGLIA — Fremd. Passaglia did a little of everything for the Vikings this season. The 6-foot-1, 187-pound senior played linebacker, punted for the second straight season and saw some action on offense as well. With 90 original hits and 73 assists, Passaglia led the Vikings in tackles from his linebacker spot for the second consecutive year. As a punter, he averaged 37.7 and yards per kick the past two seasons. In Fremd's final game he averaged more than 40 yards per kick, as the Vikings lost to Holy Cross in the state playoffs.

STEVE CAMPBELL — Elk Grove. You couldn't ask for a better suited player to call a high school football team's defensive signals than Grenadier Steve Campbell. This 5-foot-9, 177-pound senior ranks No. 1 academically in this class, achieving a perfect 5.0. "He's the heart and soul of our defense," said Elk Grove coach Don Schnake. This season was the second straight year Campbell started at offensive guard and middle linebacker for the Grenadiers.

RICK GARDNER — Forest View. Rick Gardner was Forest View's work horse this season. He started at fullback and linebacker, when platooning players is becoming the more accepted practice in high school football. The 6-foot, 196-pound senior rushed for 209 yards in 73 attempts, second best on the Falcons. He also led the team in points with 30 and receptions with 11 for 201 yards. On the opposite side, the inside linebacker anchored the small but effective Falcon defense.

CHRIS RUBAK — Fremd. Rubak was one of the most rugged defensive linemen in the Mid-Suburban League this season. The 5-foot-10, 210-pound tackle anchored the Viking defense, one which allowed only 181 yards in total offense per game. Rubak compiled impressive statistics even though this season was hifsirst in the defensive line. The senior had 63 tackles, 53 assists and five quarterback sacks.

Henricksen passes season with top marks

by ART MUGALIAN

Bruce Henricksen's physical presence does not necessarily represent a complete contradiction in terms, but his 6-foot-1, 166-pound teen-age person isn't exactly a dead giveaway either.

The lithe Barrington High School senior — who, disguised as the Bronco quarterback, broke the kind of passing records that seemed unbreakable — is only slightly less assuming than your 10-year-old brother.

BUT EVERYTHING that has been said and written about Henricksen is true, every bit of it. He is poised beyond his years, he is able. He can indeed put the ball on a dime — or a quarter or nickel or whatever you ask him to put it on. He does have that magic touch that pro quarterbacks seem to always be without. Bruce Henricksen does inspire awe in lesser mortals.

And yet, out of uniform, he looks like something a linebacker might drag in.

"People are always saying, 'You? You're a football player?' " Henricksen admitted. "Nobody believes it."

Believe it or not, Bruce has been selected to head The Daily Herald's annual All-Area Football squad as its offensive captain, an honor that is more ironic than surprising as he failed to make all-conference a year ago despite credentials even more fabulous than the ones he flashed in 1977.

THIS YEAR, Henricksen was most valuable player as chosen by the coaches of the Mid-Suburban League, an outfit that tends to recognize excellence when it presents itself. The MSL was a new challenge for Barrington and for Henricksen. The challenge was met with great gusto.

"I really didn't know how we'd do before the season started," Henricksen said. "Nobody did. The MSL was tough. It's a classy league. The competition was a little harder than the North Suburban. Just a little, though The big difference was that the competition was more consistent. We couldn't ever let down. We had to be ready every week.

"The first Elk Grove game was the turning point for us," Bruce said of the Broncos' 7-0 victory over the South Division champs in the season's second week. "When we bet them we knew we could beat the best. If we had lost, we'd have really been down."

HENRICKSEN WENT on after Elk Grove, to undo the MSL's defenses with the exacting proficiency of a diamond-cutter. He completed 123 passes in 190 attempts which figures out to a new MSL record of 65 per cent. His season total of 1,633 yards for 10 games and his two-year total of 3,080 yards and 29 touchdowns somehow seem impossible. He was intercepted just six times in 1977.

Admittedly, much of the credit for Henricksen's brillance must go to Bill Graham, the Barrington head coach whose solid reputation remained very much intact after his first year in the MSL. Graham's own stupendous record during the years in the NSC and his 9-1 mark this season speak of his abiding faith in wide-open (but not reckless) football.

"Henricksen is absolutely the best quarterback I've ever coached," Graham said. "I can't say enough about him. If he isn't All-State, then no one is."

HENRICKSEN himself is unable to verbalize his actions on the field. He can't explain why his game-sense is so uncanny or why his play-fakes seem inborn. He knows enough to move out of the pocket when such a tactic is called for. He knows when to stay in it. But he doesn't know why.

"It's really nothing I study or practice," he said. "I guess it's just instinct. I do what I think is best for the team in any situation."

While Henricksen tries to sift through his college scholarship offers including about a half dozen Big Ten bids, he is a starting guard on Barrington's basketball team, which finished 27-4 last season. Basketball, it turns out, is Bruce's favorite sport.

"BASKETBALL IS more fun than football," he said. "You can really get sick of handling off and passing all the time."

No kidding, Bruce?

Special mention

The task of selecting just 22 individual stars from 19 high schools in The Daily Herald's circulation area was a difficult one. In some cases, the balloting was extremely close, necessitating recounts and revotes.

Several young men just missed making first team selections. The Daily Herald recognizes them on its Special Mention team.

Hersey's Dino Capasso, Barrington's Steve Edwards, Elgin's Craig Feldner, Forest View's Joe Forssander, Barrington's Biff George, St. Viator's Ken Gillen, Barrington's Paul Golitz, Elgin's Tom Hayes, Arlington's Chuck Klein, Prospect's Andy Loos, Elk Grove's Rick Magsamen, Schaumburg's Tim McGraw, Palatine's Tim Reese, Elk Grove's Dave Sargent, Stevenson's Todd Schmitke, Wheeling's Bob Steinberg, Elgin's Bill Tanner and Buffalo Grove's Bob Volkman.

Local gymnasts in Cyclones' eye

Don Friske

Byline report

You have to excuse the subtle guilt in Ed Gagier's voice when he talks about the chances of his Iowa State gymnastics team winning its fourth national title this season. The guilt is highly innocent, and it's tinged with a huge smile.

"I'd like to think that this year is our best chance," he said. "If we do win the title, it will be because of Illinois gymnasts."

It is nothing new for college coaches from all over the country to come into the Chicago area each year with their recruiting eyes wide open. This area traditionally has produced some of the best high school gymnasts.

THAT COULD be one of the big reasons for all the prestige that is attached to the Midwest Open Gymnastics Championships held for more than 30 years at various places in Chicagoland.

This past weekend it was at Rolling Meadows High School, with the final competition held Saturday night before a full house.

The spectators, including many awe-struck high school gymnasts and their coaches, watched as the top eight individuals in each event went through their optional routines.

There were nine Iowa State entries among the meet's elite finalists. In the all-around competition, which was decided Friday, there were three Cyclones in the top seven.

ONE OF THOSE was a surprised Doug Smidl, a freshman who barely has learned his six compulsory routines after completing a fine career at Fremd High School last season.

"I was just hoping to make the top 10, which I thought would be pretty good," said Smidl, who ended up in the fifth spot with a total all-around score of 98.35. "Meets like this are big. Supposedly, if you do something good here, you should do well in nationals."

Smidl is already getting the winning attitude that Gagier is generating to his entire team. Iowa State had the most entries (20) in the Midwest event, and they also had three or four more all-arounders than most of the schools.

Although the meet was strictly competitive on an individual basis, the Cyclones easily would have won the team trophy.

CYCLONE STACY Maloney won the all-around crown with a score of 106.40 to edge Nebraska's Larry Gerard by less than a point. Tom Austin, another Iowa State athlete, finished seventh behind Kevin Muenz, a Hersey graduate who is competing for Southern Illinois.

"Maloney's performance was real significant for us," Gagier said. "For him to win an event of this stature, it shows he can be an international competitior. He defeated Gerard, who has competed on that level."

Maloney, a sophomore from Wisconsin, also tied for second on the parallel bars and won a sixth-place plaque for vaulting. Teammate Mark Tripple, an Evanston High School grad, took first in vaulting with a 9.425 followed by former York star Curt Austin's 9.3. Austin won the floor exercise competition with a 9.3 and Tripple took third at 9.2.

Performances like that add to the confidence that is building on the Iowa State team. The Cyclones were able to place at least one finalist in four of the six events, each one starting Friday morning with 158 entries. They also did well in all-around, having three of the top 10 from a starting field of 86.

ALONG WITH his fine showing in all-around, Smidl was also able to qualify for the finals on the parallel bars. It was an added bonus for him and his coach.

"Doug shows the potential of being the strongest all-around man we ever brought in to Iowa State," Gagier said.

Smidl finished ninth in the parallel bar competition, but the score and place were merely incidental.

He had already proven to himself and his teammates that he belonged.

Jim: "One of the things that transforms a good player into a great player is the care he takes to employ the right technique."

Oswald: "Here is a hand played some years ago by the late Olive Peterson of Philadelphia to illustrate this. Olive's tournament record included twelve women's and mixed pair and team titles."

Jim: "The bidding was normal although many modern players would have rebid three diamonds instead of two spades."

Oswald: "Olive won the first heart. There was no reason to duck and good reason not to duck. Then she led dummy's jack of spades and finessed. A second spade had to be won in her hand and it was necessary to go right back to dummy.

Jim: "Here is where Olive made the key play of the hand. She led her king of diamonds and overtook with dummy's ace."

Oswald: "A careless player would have automatically let a low diamond to dummy's jack and wound up with three diamond tricks."

Jim: "Olive's play could not hurt her. If East held four diamonds to the ten she would have made her contract in any event. With West holding the four diamonds she was able to pick up his ten spot with a finesse."

Ask Andy

Glass is old as elements used to make it

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Peter Walsh, Jr., 12, of Westbrook, Me., for his question:

HOW IS GLASS MADE?

Man first made glass about 3000 B.C. in the form of glaze for his ceramic pots. Then about 1500 B.C. the Egyptians and Mesopotamians took it one step further and came up with glass vessels. By 30 B.C. a first blowpipe for glass blowing was invented and then in 50 A.D. man came up with the first piece of manufactured window glass.

Glass is certainly one of man's most useful materials. More than 100,000 different kinds of glass items are produced, and you'll find the products touch every part of your daily life.

To make glass, glassmakers combine batch of materials that include 72 per cent sand, which is called silica; 15 percent sodium oxide, or soda, and 9 percent calcium oxide, which is lime. Four percent of the batch is made up of alumina, white-oxide or arsenic, saltpeter and lead oxide.

About 90 percent of all glass being made today is based on this soda-lime formula. It is from this mixture that glassmakers produce plate and window glass, electric light bulbs and almost all glass containers.

Glass made with a soda-lead formula substitutes lead oxide for calcium oxide and often uses a smaller percentage of silica. This type of glass has important optical properties and is used for making the finest tableware and art objects.

A heat-shock resistant glass is made by Corning Glass Works under the name of Pyrex. Here 80 percent silica is mixed with 4 percent alkali, 2 percent alumina and about 13 percent boric oxide.

There are four ways to shape glass: blowing, pressing, drawing and casting. In glass blowing, the job can be done by either having a workman actually blow into a pipe or by using complicated machinery. In pressing, a hot gob of glass is put into a mold and then pressed with a plunger until it spreads to fill the desired area. Drawing produces sheet and plate glass, tubing and fiberglass and is made by flowing molten glass through special water-cooled rollers.

Special glass-blowing machines, called ribbon machines, can turn out 2,000 light bulbs in one minute from a ribbon of hot, flexible glass.

Glass was made by hand before 1890, but then at the turn of the century large manufacturing plants were built. At first they were all located near forests since wood was used as fuel.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Charles Anderson, age 10, of Staten Island, N.Y., for his question:

WHAT MAKES IVY STICK TO BUILDINGS?

Ivy is a favorite landscaping ground cover. The name covers a large variety of creeping and climbing vines.

Common ivy, or English ivy as it is also called, climbs over walls and up buildings and trees. It has waxy, five-pointed leaves that are dark green in the summer and turn scarlet in the fall. Ivy's secret for being able to cling to a smooth surface: its stems are covered with fine air roots that have the ability to grab and hold.

You'll find Boston ivy, which is also called Japanese, climbing the shady sides of buildings in the Eastern parts or the United States. The three-pointed leaves overlap each other as they cover a wall. The plant is related closely to the Virginia creeper.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Hts., Illinois 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.
